HERE STOOD MAN FROM THE EARTH

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Apollo 11 astronauts will leave a metal plaque behind when they depart from the moon later this month. Here is its message:

"Here men from the planet Earth
First set foot upon the moon.
July 1969 AD.
We came in peace for all mankind.
Neil A. Armstrong
Edwin E. Aldrin
Michael Collins.
Richard Nixon,
President, United States of America."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the White House passed on and edited the inscription and it considers the choice of words to be those of the president. Etched on top will be two circles symbolizing the two hemispheres, with a dot in one to signify Cape Kennedy, where the mission began.

'Baiting' Charge At Ben Het Denied by U.S.

By DAVID HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

The United States military command in Saigon has disputed statements by a South Vietnamese colonel that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces were used to "bait" a trap for the Viet Cong at the Ben Het special forces camp.

Marine Colonel Nguyen Ba Lien, who commands the 24th special tactical zone composed of Kontum and Pleiku Provinces, said he decided about two months ago to use Ben Het to bait the reported equivalent of two North Vietnamese divisions operating near the border of Cambodia and Laos.

By leaving the camp lightly defended, he said he hoped to trick the divisions into massing for an assault, thus exposing them to Allied air strikes and artillery.

Rocket Shells Pound Camp

Since May 6, North Vietnamese army units encircling the hilltop outpost have pounded it with 5000 or more rounds of mixed mortar, rocket and artillery fire. Among the camp's 1,000-man defence force are approximately 100 American artillery men and Special Forces advisers, who have endured considerable privation since the seige began in early June.

Colonel Lien, the ground commander, predicted Monday afternoon that four fresh South Vietnamese (ARVN) battalions advancing toward Ben Het about 50 miles miles north of here would break the siege within three days. "I think the enemy is smashed," Lien said here at his headquarters. "The battle appears ended."

By the first week of June, enemy patrols had worked their way to Ben Het's barbed wire perimeter and were daily peppering the camp with mortar and small arms fire. In one day last week, more than 300 mortar, rocket and artillery rounds fell inside the camp.

Its defenders took up residence in underground bunkers as the Communists cut the road leading to Dakto, eight miles to the east in South Vietnam's central highlands. Since June 23, all food and ammunition for the camp have been flown in from nearby bases.

In Saigon late Monday, a spokesman for the U.S. Mili-

Weir Must Quit, Says Schreyer

WINNIPEG (CP)—The New Democratic Party, its ranks bolstered by the addition of a member elected under the Liberal banner, has mustered an over-all majority in the Manitoba legislature.

With the addition of Larry Desjardins to his caucus, NDP Leader Ed Schreyer called for the resignation before Friday of Premier Walter Weir's election-battered government.

If Mr. Weir does not resign, the NDP leader told a news conference Tuesday night, he will seek the assistance of the lieutenant-governor.

Mr. Desjardins, 46, has been a Liberal member of the legislature for St. Boniface since 1959. He announced he will join the NDP caucus and sit as a Liberal-Democrat, giving the NDP a bare majority of 29 seats in the 57-member house.

Mr. Desjardins won St. Boniface handsomely in the June 25 election with 4,206 votes to 2,656 for NDP candidate Kam Gajdosik. Conservative Maurice Arpin, constitutional adviser to former premier Duff Roblin, ran third with 1,117 votes. In the 1966 general election a Conservative was second and NDP third.

More certain than ever the NDP will take power, Mr. Schreyer announced Mr. Desjardins will head a group to gather facts on Manitoba's cultural and ethnic situation, constitutional rights and the provincial centennial next year.

Mr. Desjardins' decision to switch parties removed uncertainty from the June 25 election which resulted in the NDP winning 28 seats, an increase from 12, the PCs dropped to 22 seats from 31 in the last house, Liberals to five from their official-Oposition—total of 13, one Social Crediter was re-elected and an Independent was elected.

MAY NAME SPEAKER

Mr. Schreyer said he was considering appointment of Social Crediter Jake Froese as the first permanent Speaker of the house.

He said Mr. Froese, 51, and member for Rhineland since 1959, was "warmly and kindly inclined" to the offer.

If Mr. Froese is appointed only 27 non-NDP votes would remain in the legislature.

SCHREYER
. . . hand strengthened

Premier Weir was not available for comment, but there was no indication he would do anything other than resign.

There is constitutional precedent, however, for him to seek a vote of confidence in the legislature or he could call another election.

EARLIEST TIME

After a caucus meeting last week, the Conservative leader set today as the earliest time at which he would make an announcement.

Liberal Leader R. W. (Bobby) Bend, who lost his bid for a Manitoba legislature seat to Resources Minister Harry Enns, had no comment on Mr. Desjardins decision. He said he would be "interested to see a definition" of the term Liberal Democrat, the status Mr. Desjardins said he will hold in the NDP caucus.

Mr. Desjardins, Liberal spokesman on French-Canadian issues in the last legislature, said Mr. Schreyer's announced approval of the federal languages bill was a factor in his decision.

Charles Sets Forth To Tour Restive Wales

CAERNARVON (CP) — Cheering yachtsmen and spectators ashore greeted Prince Charles today at the vacation resort of Llandudno as the new Prince of Wales began a four-day "meet the people" tour of his restive domain.

The 20-year-old heir to the throne had a cozy dinner party with friends before leaving Hollyhead aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

Small sailboats and yachts clustered around the Britannia when it arrived at Llandudno, on Wales' north coast, after the overnight trip from Holyhead, on the Isle of Anglesey. But security was heavy, and navy frogmen searched the Llandudno pier for bombs throughout the night.

Prince Charles landed just after 9 a.m. wearing a dark brown suit. As the royal barge moved toward the pier, he waved in acknowledgement of the cheers.

•

The prince had said he wanted to meet as many Welsh people as possible during his tour. At Llandudno town hall, he signed the visitors book and talked with local officials.

He was to visit Denbigh, Caernarvon, Merioneth, Montgomery and Cardigan Shires today before returning to spend the night aboard the Britannia off Newquay on the west coast of Wales.

There was a brief alert on a lonely mountain road near Llandudno when security men found a wire running into a manhole from a telephone pole. An RAF bomb disposal officer cut the wire minutes before the prince's cavalcade passed by.

"I am 100-per-cent certain it is not a bomb," the lieutenant said. He said it seemed to be an old telephone appliance.

•

The villagers of Bala formed their own vigilante group to guard the prince. One member of the group said, "any attempt to interfere with our plans to welcome our prince will be strongly dealt with."

The men, armed with shotguns, patrolled the area through the night, looking for anything suspicious.

Army helicopters patrolled the roads the prince used through the morning.

Security men, blanketing the countryside and clearing roads for the prince's cavalcade added a grim and sombre note.

There was another bomb scare near the town

SECURITY IN BAGS

CAERNARVON (Reuters) — Journalists covering the investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales Tuesday had to resort to a medieval method to get their copy out of 13th century Caernarvon Castle during the ceremony.

They had to put their stories in a leather pouch which was then lowered from the battlements to a messenger waiting outside.

The reason: No one was allowed out of the castle during the five-hour ceremony.

The rule was laid down for security reasons and because it was not feasible to install telephone lines in the press boxes on the castle battlements.

Reporters also ran into trouble finding out information about the security arrangements for the investiture.

Hospital Contract

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today announced the provincial government has approved a $5,000,000 contract for additions and renovations to the Penticton hospital.

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today that battle activity in South Vietnam in the last week may have dropped to the lowest level of the war and he indicated this could increase United States troop withdrawals if the lull continues.

Rogers also told a news conference that "we know pretty conclusively" that the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam has declined in the last two or three months but the reason for this is not clear.

Rogers cautioned that the reason for the battlefield lull is not yet quite clear either, saying more time would be required to decide whether it is politically significant.

He said, however, that "we hope this is a response to the announcement by President Nixon and President Thieu (of South Vietnam) at Midway." The Midway Island announcement June 8 disclosed Nixon's decision to withdraw 25,000 American troops by the end of August.

Rogers suggested the reason for the battlefield lull could be because North Vietnamese forces might be regrouping or might be having trouble replacing their manpower.

On other subjects, Rogers said the U.S. administration sees no reason why Nixon's planned visit to Romania in early August should affect "good relations with the Soviet Union."

In response to a question he said the U.S. had not advised the Soviet Union of the president's planned visit in advance of the announcement here.

The U.S. has asked Soviet officials what Soviet premier Leonid Brezhnev intends with his recent suggestion for an Asian security system. So far, Rogers said, the U.S. has no clarification.

Rogers agreed with a hopeful assessment of the Vietnam peace talks in Paris expressed today by State Undersecretary Elliott Richardson rather than a gloomy view expressed by Vice-President Spiro Agnew. Richardson expects serious negotiations to develop; Agnew claimed that U.S. critics of Nixon policy encourage the Communists to remain uncompromising.

Six Planes Downed In Suez Skirmish

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel claimed its jets shot down four Egyptian MiGs in a dogfight over the Gulf of Suez today. Egypt did not confirm the losses but claimed two Israeli Mirages were shot down.

Cairo radio quoted a military communique as saying two Israeli plane formations entered Egyptian air space in the Ain el Suk Neh area, were intercepted by MiGs and two Israeli jets were shot down in the ensuing fight.

The Israeli Army said its planes encountered the MiGs while on patrol, pursued them and four of the Soviet-built planes were seen falling in Egyptian territory.

The Israelis now claim to have shot down 25 Egyptian warplanes since the 1967 war.

The Israelis claimed they shot down two MiGs on June 26 and another one two days before.

The Israelis also confirmed that some of their jets flew over Cairo last June 17, an audicious move that led to the firing of Egypt's air force chief, Gen. Mustapha el Hennaw, and Gen. Hassan Kamel.

Their dismissal was announced in Cairo June 23. Egypt's new air chief Gen. Alo Baghdadi, lost thre MiGs by Israeli count within days of assuming his new office.

The air clash follows Israeli commando raids on three Egyptian positions in the Gulf of Suez Tuesday night and an Arab guerrilla attack on an Israeli army position in Jordan's occupied west bank.

CZECHS PURGED

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's hardline Communist bosses purged officials in two major party organizations and announced editorial shakeups on three daily newspapers today.

The moves were part of the continuing drive to dismantle the liberal Communist apparatus and press freedoms that existed in Czechoslovakia before the Soviet-led invasion in August, 1968.

Holiday Noisy And Fun

The sun shone and many Victorians of all ages and tastes celebrated Dominion Day holiday by watching a stirring military display or sitting through a marathon 12 hours of rock music.

More than 300 marchers walked the 10-mile route from Willows Park around the perimeter of Oak Bay "Canada's most beautiful walkathon," a holiday celebration and fund-raising event in one.

Victoria MP David Groos walked with the other marchers to help raise money to send the Oak Bay Senior Secondary band to Expo 70 in Japan.

Hugh Brimacombe and Rosemary Bullen were the winners of the Walter Dodsworth Rosebowl Trophy for completing the circuit in the secret-prize time of 3 hours and 25 minutes.

Officials estimate the march raised $4,000 to $5,000 towards the band trip.

FEU DE JOIE

Military enthusiasts flocked to watch the 1st Battalion of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada perform the Feu de Joie ceremony in Beacon Hill Park, a major event in the holiday celebrations.

Following inspection of the more than 275 troops by Mayor Hugh Stephen, members of the 5th Field Battery, RCA, fired a 21-gun salute.

"Warn your children, this is going to be loud," spectators were advised and no one was disappointed.

Ear battering of a different variety was provided by a continuous 12-hour long rock festival in Memorial Arena from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m. for the younger holiday celebrants.

More than 2,000 watched 10 bands, local and American, perform.

In Sidney an estimated 8,700 attended Dominion Day celebrations at Sidney Day Monday and Tuesday.

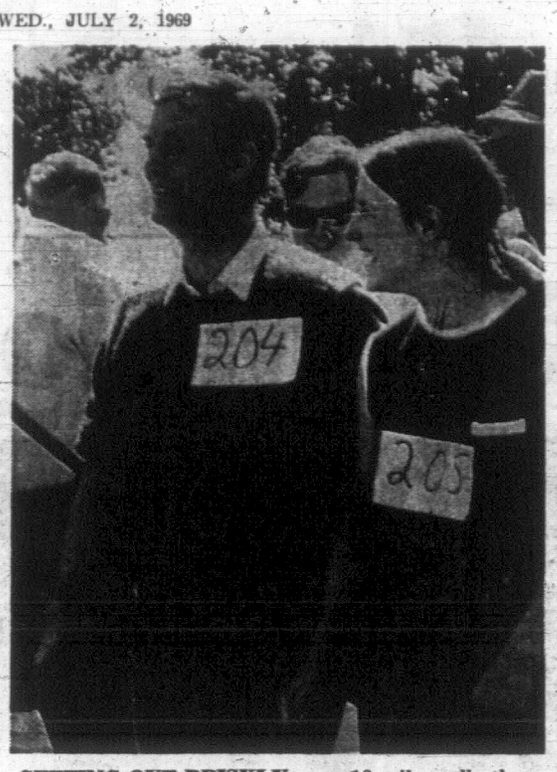
The two days of events included at parade Tuesday morning, a Lions Club sponsored 10-mile walkathon, a Kinsmen Club fish food fiesta, and a 21-mile boat race.

Miss Mermaid, Linda Pue, 4575 Wilkinson Rd., was crowned at Tulista Park, Monday evening.

Her two princesses were Trudy Rogers and Debbie Nichol.

Walkathon winner, Bob Turner, 18, 10805 MacDonald Park Dr., completed the course in one hour and 11 minutes.

Terry Sievert completed the boat race from Tulista Park to White Rock ahead of seven other competitors.



SETTING OUT BRISKLY on a 10-mile walkathon around Oak Bay are Victoria MP David Groos and his daughter Hillary, 13. He took time out from a Dominion Day holiday to take part and was sponsored by several of his parliamentary colleagues in Ottawa. (Robin Clarke Photo)

hall at Port Talbot, south Wales. Trains were held up for half an hour on the nearby railway while disposal units dismantled what turned out to be an old bomb casing wired to an alarm clock. There was no explosive element attached.

Nine hours after the Queen invested her son and heir as the 21st Prince of Wales, a terrorist gasoline firebomb killed a military policeman from the Welch Fusiliers just outside the walls of ancient Caernarvon Castle, site of Tuesday's investiture.

Everywhere the prince went today he was greeted enthusiastically, laughing and joking with the crowds as he continued his journey across northern and western Wales.

British Atom Force Moves to Submarines

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain said Tuesday it has transferred its nuclear strike-force from delta-wing bombers to Polaris submarines.

The defence ministry made the disclosure, which ends a 12-year nuclear role by the Royal Air Force's V-bombers.

Two nuclear submarines, the Repulse and the Resolution, each carrying 16 Polaris missiles, are already in operation. They are to be joined soon by a third, the Renown.

The defence ministry would not say when the changeover took place, but it had been known for some time that the move would be made before the end of the year.

Seven nuclear fleet submarines will eventually be brought into service. The Revenge will be the fourth Polaris submarine and three Hunter submarines, the Churchill, launched last December, and the Valiant and Warspite, now under construction, will complete the fleet.

BROKER DEFRAUDS CRIPPLED SISTER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A real estate broker has been convicted of bilking his half-blind, crippled, widowed sister of $174,000.

Judge Mark Brandler, in Superior Court, ruled Robert J. Gentile, 44, guilty Monday of six counts of grand theft in deceiving Josephine McGee about a loan.

He will be sentenced August 8. The money represented most of a settlement Mrs. McGee received from a 1963 traffic accident that left her confined to a wheelchair.

Safe Loot $100,000

MONTREAL (CP) — City police and postal investigators today are investigating the theft of an estimated $100,000 in cash and stamps from a west-end post office.

Police said thieves carried out the safe-cracking either Tuesday or during the night.

. . . BEN HET

tary Command said he could not comment specifically on Col. Lien's statement that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had been used as "bait." But the spokesman did say that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, U.S. commander in Vietnam, had declared more than once that American boys would "never" be used as "bait" as long as he was in command.

Western correspondents returning from Ben Het and at least a dozen U.S. officers who fought around it expressed suprise or even laughter Monday night informed of Col. Lien's contention. They reasoned that if indeed Allied strategy was to bait the NVA with Ben Het, that strategy, as such things go, was an abnormally well-kept secret.

During the past two days, Communist bombardment of the Special Forces camp lost much of its old intensity. U.S. advisors theorized that NVA had begun retreating into Cambodia and Laos, leaving behind less than one battlion to screen its withdrawal.

●

According to Col. Lien, the vanguard of the ARVN relief force approached Monday evening to within two kilometers of Ben Het's eastern perimeter. The four ARVN battalions, moving generally westward along the road from Dakto, have encountered surprisingly little opposition thus far, reinforcing the theory the Communists have decided to break their seige.

The South Vietnamese commanders claim to have killed 1,850 NVA since the action began May 6, with about half accounted for by air strikes. Allied losses are reported at about 300 killed and 100 missing in action, with about 1,000 wounded.

The question repeatedly asked here is why the ARVN has taken so long—at least three weeks—to relieve hard-pressed Ben Het? Senior American advisors say the South Vietnamese commander in the central highlands (II Corps) set a different priority. Instead of driving straight for the outpost after he had massed a relief force, he fanned his battalions out and has sought unsuccessfully to engage the NVA, they said. The priority was on finding and fighting the enemy rather than relieving Ben Het, they say.

●

Asked to assess enemy strategy, Col. Lien said the Communists sought but failed to demonstrate that the ARVN could not be relied upon to protect American combat support units. But in no sense did Col. Lien see the Ben Het fighting as a test of the ARVN's capability vs. that of the NVA. "The units were too small," he said; South Vietnam has more than a million men under arms, "and only two or three thousand are involved here," he added.

Referral Sales Outlawed In Consumer Act Changes

Several sales gimmicks, including referral selling, are now illegal in British Columbia.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Monday amendments to the Consumer Protection Act went into effect this week.

Referral selling, by which the buyer supposedly has his monthly payments reduced in return for names of other prospective buyers, is ruled out.

The buyer often found himself stuck with large payments because few of the names furnished bought goods.

Peterson said his department will keep a close watch on referral selling, but added: "We're not going to be looking over everyone's shoulder."

"I'm sure that once people know the law prohibits this kind of selling it will become an obsolete practice."

Other changes designed to protect the buyer require interest charges to be spelled out in dollars and cents as well as in an annual percentage.

All contracts must now contain the names and addresses of buyer and seller and a description of the goods purchased.

Sites Get Phone Pickets

Lower mainland construction sites started to shut down today as telephone workers extended picketing to places where B.C. Tel supervisory personnel were installing new phone services.

Bert Johns, spokesman for Federation of B.C. Telephone Workers who are in the 10th day of their strike, said the new line of picketing had so far attracted no injunctions and would be expanded as the union learns of locations where B.C. Tel management people are acting as installers and servicemen.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

The Weather and You

There are a number of obvious and not-so-obvious advantages to use in the summer weather that covers our continent. Summer gives us all of the warmweather sports and outdoor living. It also is the best time for relaxation; physical stress imposes less strain in summer than it does in winter. That's why summer is a good time for vacations.

Summer helps us in still another way. It is a good time to go all-out and keep those promises you made in the cold of last winter to really work at getting thinner through dieting. The warm weather, day after day, may be far less stressful to the human body than it was three or four months ago.

Your body knows all about the seasons. It senses the changes in the atmosphere and reacts to it by adjusting to make you feel comfortable no matter what the weather.

TELEPHONE STRIKE

What is a fair wage in British Columbia?

The officers of the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. have led their membership into a strike against B.C. Telephone, demanding wage increases of 32.1 per cent by January 1, 1970 and reduced hours and other benefits bringing the total increase to 43.5 per cent.

B.C. Telephone previously agreed to accept the terms recommended unanimously by a federal conciliation board, including a 17-per-cent wage increase by January 1, 1970, with 10 per cent effective from last January 1st.

The Company considers the terms recommended unanimously by the conciliation board to be fair and generous in British Columbia or anywhere else. The following information is presented so you can decide for yourself.

Many jobs in the telephone industry have no counterpart in other business so direct comparisons cannot be made with other businesses in British Columbia. It is a fact, however, that wages and salaries generally in British Columbia are higher than in other parts of Canada.

For instance, based on Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures for average industrial salaries and wages presented in evidence before the conciliation board, British Columbia is 5.2% above Ontario.

If this average in B.C. is 5.2% above Ontario, then how fair is a wage rate in British Columbia that is 24% above the rate for the equivalent job in Ontario?

Under the conciliation board's unanimous recommendations, which B.C. Telephone accepted:

A B.C. TEL INSTALLER-REPAIRMAN at top rate — and 500 of the 886 men in this wage group are at top rate — would earn $777 a month as of Jan. 1, 1969 — or 24% more than his equivalent in Ontario. (Union demands would increase this latter figure to 33%.)

A B.C. TEL TRAFFIC OPERATOR at top rate — and 676 of the 2,080 operators in this wage group are at top rate — would earn $422 a month as of Jan. 1, 1969 — or 12.8% more than her equivalent in the telephone industry in Ontario, the percentage taking into account a work week 2½ hours shorter in B.C. Tel than in Ontario. (Union demands would increase this latter percentage figure to 21.2%.)

A B.C. TEL INTERMEDIATE STENOGRAPHER at top rate — and 239 of the 572 in this wage group are at top rate — would earn $473 a month as of Jan. 1, 1969 — or 7.2% more than her equivalent in Ontario's telephone industry.

IN ADDITION, an independent survey was made in March, 1969 of clerical wages paid by the 21 largest employers in British Columbia, including B.C. Tel. It showed that, when the 10% increase recommended for 1969 by the conciliation board is incorporated, the average wages paid to B.C. TEL CLERICAL EMPLOYEES WOULD BE 11.8% ABOVE the weighted average for all companies involved.

In light of these facts, B.C. Tel maintains that wage levels recommended by the conciliation board are more than fair and reasonable in British Columbia for the nature of the tasks involved. This is particularly so when it is recognized that B.C. Tel's working conditions are comparable to the best anywhere, that employees have job security and that year-round work is assured.

Britain Submits Treaty To Outlaw Germ Warfare

GENEVA (AP) — Britain will submit a draft treaty to ban germ warfare to the next session of the disarmament conference which reopens here Thursday, reliable sources said today.

The United States and the Soviet Union have both indicated that they would prefer to concentrate on a treaty which would prevent the sea bed becoming a potential base for aggression.

•

The first thing to confront the conference, now boosted to 19 member nations with the inclusion of Japan and Mongolia, will be a report prepared for the United Nations by 14 international experts warning that the use of biological and chemical weapons in any future war "would open the doors to horrors beyond control of mankind."

Britain last August proposed a new international convention banning the manufacture and use of bacteriological weapons.

Sources said the British now are ready to present a complete draft treaty.

•

The Soviet Union has already rejected the British proposal and has said the 1925 Geneva protocol banning chemical and bacteriological weapons is adequate. The British argue that the 1925 agreement is outmoded, does not ban the manufacture of such weapons, does not cover many new agents which have been discovered since then, and has been signed only by a limited number of nations.

The United States did not sign the 1925 protocol, but it has informally pledged to observe its provisions.

Mao Bids to Regain Power From Military Bloc Chiefs

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — Communist party Chariman Mao Tse-tung has made three big moves to reclaim some of the political power now in the hands of China's military leaders.

He ordered the Communist party to take over leadership of China's 29 revolutionary committees, rebuild and strengthen its branches in the provinces and revive its once-powerful but recently-neglected Communist Youth League.

The 75-year-old party chief's orders were outlined in a joint editorial published Monday on the party's 48th anniversary in three Maoist organs — the Peking People's Daily, the Liberation Army Daily and the theoretical journal Red Flag.

The editorial said revolutionary committees must form "a strong core of the party leadership . . . which is armed with Mao Tse-tung's thought, exercises unified leadership and keeps close ties with the masses."

CALLS ON THE MASSES

Mao was quoted as saying: "Every party branch must reconsolidate itself in the midst of the masses. This must be done with the participation of the masses and not merely a few party members."

The editorial said all organs — the army, the Youth League, workers, poor and middle-class peasants and Mao's paramilitary Red Guards — must accept party leadership and abide by Mao's policies.

It added: "The consolidation of the Communist Youth League should also be started."

China's revolutionary committees, active in provinces, regions and independent municipalities, have evolved into a form far different from what Mao originally envisaged. They are dominated by the military, the only disciplined force left in the wake of Mao's "Great Cultural Revolution."

The Communist Youth League, described as a "school for communism" and once the source of many party members, went into eclipse during the Cultural Revolution after Mao established the Red Guards. But the Red Guards rampaged through the country, and Mao now appears to prefer a revival of the old youth group.

The party's ninth national congress, held in Peking in April, resulted in the selection of tough-minded military men to many top positions.

Of the 170 members elected to a new and expanded central committee, 73 were military commanders, deputy commanders or political commissars, and 32 others had military backgrounds.

Mao handpicked the delegates to the congress and had hoped they would reaffirm his recovery of power from purged President Liu Shao-chi.

But Mao's latest announcement indicates he is disturbed by the military leaders and now considers them a threat to his position and that of the party.

DIEFENBAKER DOWN ON DRAFT DODGERS

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Monday American draft dodgers should not be welcomed in Canada.

In Kansas City to address the Order of DeMolay international conference, opening Tuesday, the 73-year-old Canadian politician made his remarks about draft dodgers in an interview.

"As far as I am concerned," Diefenbaker said, "if these people are not prepared to defend their own country then they are of no use to Canada."

Homosexuality Alone No Dismissal Reason

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals ruled 2 to 1 Tuesday that federal civil service workers may not be fired solely on grounds that they are homosexuals.

The court decided that homosexuality justifies dismissal only if it demonstrably affects the employee's job performance or the efficiency of his department.

Chief Judge David L. Bazelton, joined by Judge J. Skelly Wright, said:

"The notion that it could be an appropirate function of the federal bureaucracy to enforce the majority's conventional codes of conduct in the private lives of its employees is at war with elementary concepts of liberty, privacy and diversity."

Judge Edward A. Tamm dissented.

The case concerned Clifford L. Norton of Washington, a former budget analyst at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, who was fired in 1963.

Those Basic Assumptions

THE REJECTION LAST SATURDAY of Victoria's five-year capital spending program by little more than 20 per cent of the eligible voters emphasizes the need for some critical study of the basic assumptions underlying municipal government in Canada.

One such assumption, apparently still widely accepted in British Columbia, is that tenants don't pay their way in cities because they don't pay property taxes. Yet property taxes are invariably passed on to tenants in the form of increased rents. The only general exception to this is in times of economic depression when rents are frozen. But it is still common for the exclusion of tenants from referendum votes such as last Saturday's to be justified by the argument that tenants don't pay their way.

The consequence of clinging to this old land-holders' view of municipal politics is twofold. In general, it weakens the democratic process by restricting participation in local politics. In the particular case of Victoria, with a high proportion of older property owners on fixed incomes, it shifts the balance of power to the "status quo" forces in the community at a time when resistance to capital expenditures must be tempered with foresight and awareness of the need for change. A decade of status quo voting on similar questions, for instance, could be disastrous for the city and its next generation of taxpayers. Extending wider voting rights to tenants may be necessary to preserve a safer balance between two legitimate points of view.

Another basic assumption in local government has been the sanctity of municipal boundaries, perhaps founded on a belief in some mystical sense of "community" or perhaps on simple tradition. The consequence in Victoria is that the fate of projects which will benefit the entire urban area is thrust into the hands of a small group of landowners in the core of the region. The cost of these same works would also be thrust into the core area, it should be added. Occasional arrangements to share the financial load only strengthen the case for reassessment of the basic problem — the old boundaries which, like so many other things in local government, simply go on and on.

A full reassessment of basic assumptions, of course, should go further afield than that. The whole idea of dropping major political decisions into the laps of taxpayers should be examined in the light of the development of modern representative democracy — in which elected officials make the decisions and are held responsible at the polls for their records — and also in the light of the vastly more complex issues being presented to taxpayers in 1969 than, say, in 1919. A good, thorough public debate on the underlying assumptions of local government would be useful for both politicians and public.

The African Dilemma

THE DEATH OF MOISE TSHombe marks the end of one of the most bizarre chapters in the history of modern Africa. The French gangster who hijacked the former Congo president's chartered aircraft two years ago has never publicly disclosed the name or purpose of his employer, and so the sensational kidnapping remains shrouded in mystery.

Although Tshombe had been out of touch for the past four years—two exiled in Spain and two imprisoned in Algeria — he still represented an important factor in the complex web of African politics until the time of his death. Now it remains to be seen whether the controversial policies which he attempted to introduce in the Congo will be applied elsewhere or rejected by the new African leaders.

Tshombe was vilified by the most militant of these leaders because he expressed a view that was anathema to them — that the white man was necessary for the development of his country. This view led to the accusation that he was a pawn of European capitalist interests. Enough doubts were raised by his flamboyance and accumulation of private wealth to make a judgment of the man difficult.

But the problems he faced in the Congo remain the ones haunting the present leaders. Some follow a line of intense nationalism, rejecting almost all white assistance and foreign investment; others who seek aid from the Soviet Union or China may find themselves subject to the same kind of outside control and interference which they fear from western capitalism.

Still others, like President Kaunda of Zambia, have sought a middle road, accepting help when needed and making use of white skills, but at the same time firmly guiding the country to its own destiny. None of the newly-independent African nations have enough capital to generate their own development and enable them to completely reject foreign investment. Their best course would seem to lie in following Kaunda's example, rather than that of Tshombe or the extremists of the opposite side.

Oil On the Waters

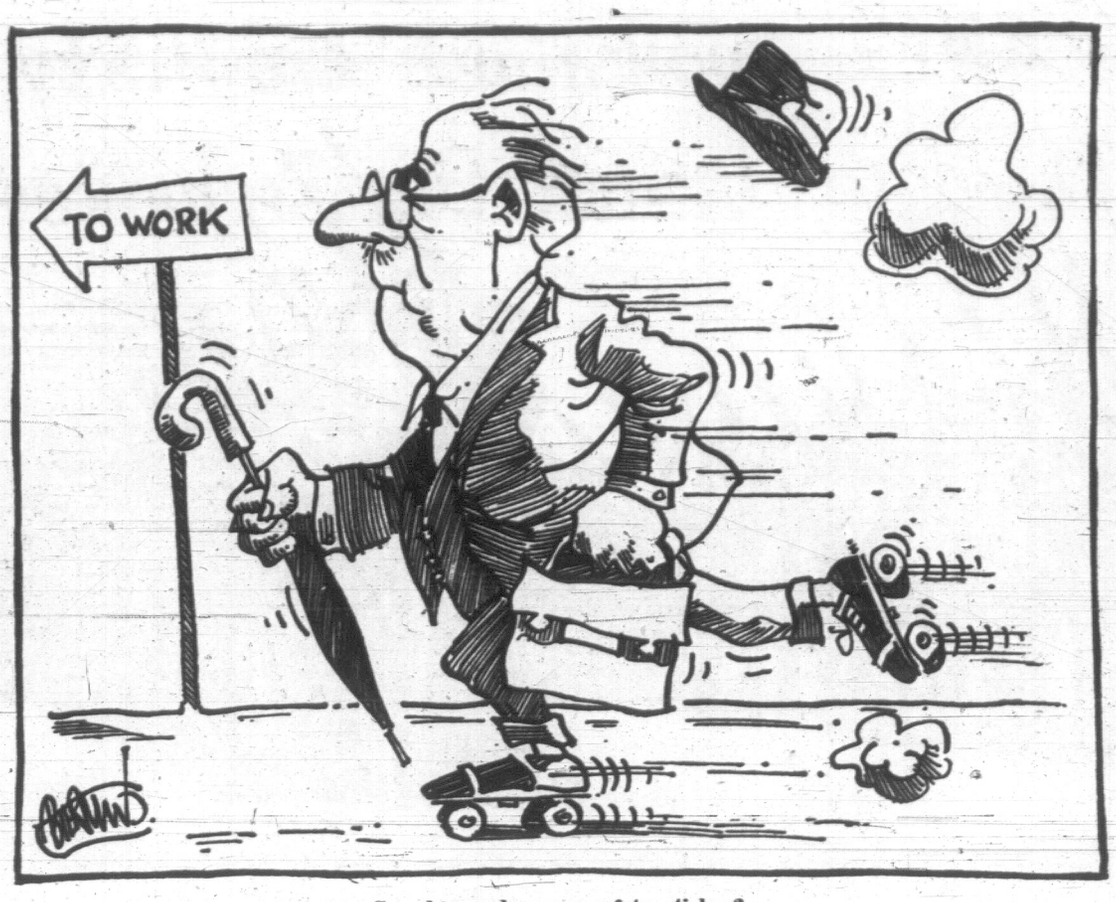
NOW THAT THE OIL DRILLing program off the British Columbia coast has been abandoned — at least for the present — one threat has been removed to pollution of the shoreline and destruction of wildlife. But a new one will soon be on the scene — giant tankers plying the North Pacific between the vast oil fields now being opened up in Alaska and refineries in the United States.

This presents the possibility of tankers becoming involved in collisions, being wrecked or damaged in the violent storms of the area, or causing accidental leakages. Who would be responsible for the clean-up and damage bills, even though some would be irreparable? This is still somewhat of a grey area in international law, but some countries are beginning to take individual action to fix responsibility and it may be time for Canada to do the same.

The United States government is laying down its own standards and a bill is expected shortly to be approved by the Senate. The draft bill provides that ships will be liable for clean-up costs equal to $150 dollars for each ton of their weight in cases of oil spillage, regardless of negligence. The ships will be required to carry insurance or other proof of financial responsibility to meet the first $67-a-ton of this liability.

The bill also deals with other types of oil facilities such as coastal storage tanks. Where no negligence can be shown, the liability for clean-up is limited to $8 millions. With negligence proved, liability would be unlimited.

This is the type of legislation Canada should be considering for its own expanding industry. Incidents elsewhere have shown that oil spillage is a serious problem, and a costly one. The country should also be pressing for some form of international protection for mishaps that occur outside territorial waters.



So who needs a car safety sticker?

It Pays to Try

Is there a land with more freedom than Canada or greater opportunities for success in your chosen type of employment? Here you can pretty well do what you please, naturally obeying the commonsense laws of both the country and your mind.

Anyone not seriously handicapped has a great number of hobbies to choose from — some that might start off as a pastime, but develop into a creative and financial success.

In the hospital I learned weaving as a hobby besides various small items like place mats, etc. By the kindness of a sister and another skilled dressmaker I now can wear five nicely tailored shirt-jackets made from the material I've woven; frankly I won't sell them for love or money!

Though I have multiple sclerosis and was bedridden for some time, through the kind and patient effort of the hospital doctors and physical instructors at Shaughnessy hospital, Vancouver, from helplessly dragging my legs in a walker, I am now able to walk slowly with canes, and quite quickly behind my wheelchair. Though my left hand is far from perfect, I've managed to type this with only a few mistakes, and occasionally beat some of the better shuffleboard players.

So let's say one lesson I've truly learned is that it pays to try. — Art Harbo, Veterans' Hospital, Victoria.

Reasons for Indian Suspiciousness

THE goals and general philosophy of the new Indian policy announced by Mr. Chretien will command general support and many of the specific proposals will, almost certainly, be welcomed by most band leaders. But the difficulties of implementing the policy are serious and they will not be made easier by attempts to gloss them over or to ignore them at the present stage of discussions.

Western

Mr. Chretien begins with the proposition that policy must lead to "the full, free and non-discriminatory participation of the Indian people in Canadian society." Over a five-year period the government hopes to put an end to the regime which has set Indians apart from other Canadians.

This means an end to the Indian Act and the Indian department. The "legislative and constitutional bases of discrimination" will be removed. Indians will obtain normal services through the same channels and same governments as other Canadians; in other words, federal programs will gradually be phased out and funds made available to the provinces for these services. The control of Indian lands will pass to the bands, now gravely handicapped because they cannot lease, mortgage or otherwise dispose of reserve property without the approval of the minister as trustee.

"Lawful obligations" are to be recognized and the government, instead of appointing an Indian claims commission, will appoint a single commission "to consult with the Indians and to study and recommend acceptable procedures for the adjudication of claims."

Important Questions

A variety of important questions arise. The first has to do, less with the merit of one of Mr. Chretien's proposals — elimination of the Indian Act — than with the procedure followed. For the past year the department has been holding consultations with Indian people across the country and with their representatives based upon a booklet entitled, Choosing a Path, and 34 questions arising from it.

A ministerial introduction said: "The new act has to take into account the wishes of the Indian people" and again: "The act itself, like all federal laws, will be made by Parliament but the members of Parliament will be told what you have suggested you want in the act."

After consultations in this context, Mr. Chretien has suddenly changed the program without notice to the Indians. This is surely a strange way of seeking the confidence of an alienated people.

At a press conference last Wednesday, Mr. Chretien rather brushed aside questions about constitutional change — elimination of the provision in the BNA Act that Indians and lands reserved for Indians are within federal jurisdiction. He argued persuasively that most of the things the government wishes to do can be implemented without constitutional change.

Why Spur Mistrust?

In that case why mention, at this early stage, a proposal that many Indians are bound to view with distrust? For it is undoubtedly a fact that the Indian people regard some provincial governments with deep suspicion and even hostility. In some cases this arises from what they consider usurpation of their lands.

But there are other reasons. Why should they welcome a transfer of responsibility to Quebec province which to this day denies them even the vote in provincial elections?

Mr. Chretien will probably find that some Indians would welcome such a change and that Indians in other provinces would oppose it. How is this problem to be met? In any case it would seem wise to keep this altogether apart from the general constitutional talks.

The government has always proposed to deal separately with the question of Indian treaty claims. This is a very sensitive matter. Unfortunately, parts of Mr. Chretien's statement, when taken with the decision to abandon the claims commission, seem bound to arouse apprehension.

Thus the minister emphasizes the "limited and minimal promises" included in the treaties and their declining economic significance. He goes on to say that the government and the Indian people "must reach a common understanding of the future role of the treaties" and argues that "once Indian lands are securely within Indian control, the anomaly of treaties between groups within society and the government of that society will require that these treaties be reviewed to see how they can be equitably ended."

Claims Grievances

Another passage refers to grievances relating to aboriginal claims to land. "These are so general and undefined that it is not realistic to think of them as specific claims capable of remedy except through a policy and program that will end justice to Indians as members of the Canadian community."

It seems to me that the new policy confuses two things: the government's responsibility to assist disadvantaged people including most of the Indians but also some whites and the special responsibility to meet the claims of the Indians as the original possessors of the land.

The basis of the treaties was an explicit recognition by government that there existed an aboriginal title which had to be extinguished before land could be used for the government's purposes. Hopelessly inadequate, it was nevertheless a compensation.

The trouble is that some Indians did not get what the treaties promised and large numbers (including most of those in Quebec; British Columbia and the Yukon — and all the Eskimos) were not covered by treaty.

Mr. Chretien admits this in part. He refers to the Mackenzie Land Question (outstanding for nearly 50 years) and says that the government wants to see these obligations dealt with as soon as possible.

But what of the other Indians who must have shared in the aboriginal title and who got nothing? It is "not realistic" to think of claims "so general and undefined." At his press conference the minister implied that the business about the aboriginal title is mere theory. In respect to half the Indians, however, policy was founded on that theory.

Even if there had been no treaties the government doubtless would favor "a policy and program that will end injustice to Indians as members of the Canadian community."

Again with reference to the treaties, Mr. Chretien says: "The services that have been provided go far beyond what could have been foreseen by those who signed the treaties."

Naturally. The services enjoyed by all members of he community go far beyond anything which could have been foreseen by whites when the government was in the treaty business.

Further, the government is now bound to spend more on Indians and Eskimos because it neglected them for so long that they became hopelessly underprivileged groups. It also broke up their way of life.

Probable Hostility

For these reasons, among others (including the reference to taxation of reserve lands) the new policy statement seems likely to meet with a rather hostile reception. One has the impression that Mr. Chretien, a young and vigorous minister, has grown impatient with delays and is trying to by-pass obstacles in order to get ahead with his program of liquidating an always unhappy department. But one of those obstacles is the problem of confidence which is linked inextricably with the deeply felt grievance of the Indian claims.

Pull-Out Momentum Being Pushed Ahead

ONCE a president starts on a course of action, especially in the conduct of a war, it usually has a way of generating its own momentum. This was what happened to President Johnson once he decided to escalate the war in Vietnam, and this may very well happen to President Nixon now that he has started the process of withdrawal.

Reston

Presidents have the power to change the direction of policy but not always the power to control the speed of the machine once it has been set in motion. When you sue for peace, it is hard to explain why young men die while the old men talk. When some units are withdrawn from the battle, it is not quite so easy to maintain the zeal of the units that have to go on fighting for limited and ambiguous goals.

Nixon, of course, would like to stop the fighting and concentrate on the negotiating, and no doubt he would prefer to treat all fighting units alike, but this is beyond his control. His step by step withdrawal is logical, but the logic of dying for a dying cause is hard for the families of the remaining soldiers to accept.

So the first withdrawals build up pressure for more withdrawals. The first contingents amounted to only 25,000 men, which sounded small in relation to the 550,000 Americans in Vietnam, but the 25,000 were fighting units, and this is at least a tenth of the total actually engaged in battle.

The President has said that he will withdraw more as the South Vietnamese demonstrate their capacity to replace them. He has also said that, if necessary, he will reverse himself to achieve his military and political objectives. But it is hard to imagine any President, in the present antiwar mood of the country, reversing the withdrawal policy even if the South Vietnamese do not demonstrate their capacity to hold the line.

In some ways, it is even harder for Nixon to stop the process of de-escalation now than it was for Johnson to stop the process of escalation. Every week something happens to increase the anti-war feelings.

Just over a week ago, it was Clark Clifford, the former Secretary of Defense, calling for the withdrawal of all ground troops by 1970. Goaded by this pressure, the President said he hoped to do even better than that, and thus greatly increased the pressure on himself.

Meanwhile, there are the weekly casualty lists. Last week the tolls were 247 Americans dead and 1,686 wounded, and each day the Quakers read the roll of the 36,625 dead from the steps of the Capitol in Washington, each name a drop of poison in the body politic.

About the only thing that gives the President any freedom of action at all in this delicate and agonizing retreat from Vietnam is the rigidity of the enemy officials in Hanoi and their negotiators in Paris. No matter what moves Mr. Nixon makes toward a compromise settlement, they stick to their two demands for the unconditional withdrawal of all American troops and the destruction of the present Saigon Government. Only by insisting that the U.S. accept these humiliating and dishonorable proposals could the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong reverse the process of withdrawal.

Grim Outlook

Thus, it will probably take some major new development in Washington, Hanoi or Saigon to break the present stalemate, and even then the outlook for the President is extremely grim.

Hanoi could hurry the process of getting the Americans out by simply lowering the level of fighting and infiltrating — and there is some evidence that they may be experimenting with that, at least temporarily. Washington could bring the dilemma to the point of crisis by speeding up the timetable of withdrawal. And the South Vietnamese themselves might create a new situation by insisting on a more representative government than they now have.

On any foreseeable course, however, unless the South Vietnamese prove to be a far more effective fighting force than they have been so far, there is great trouble ahead. In fact, as the withdrawals increase, so are the tensions between Washington and Saigon likely to increase.

"We should not underestimate the difficulties of withdrawing," one high official said privately the other day. "I am for it and I think it is now irreversible, but the bitterness and even the dangers of withdrawal have to be faced. We may, in fact, have to fight our way out of that country in the end, with units of both the North and South Vietnamese against us. That would be the final irony of this terrible tragedy, but we shouldn't rule it out."

The fight for trees in Oak Bay municipality is still going on. The trees involved were cut down on the road near Mr. Rattenbury's house.

TRANSPLANTS: Implications Are Tricky But We Need to 'Unstick Our Prejudices'

Along with the rejection mechanisms of the body which make it throw out an alien part, there is a rejection mechanism of the mind: a tendency to shudder away from any thought of mucking about with a dead body. Or cutting into a live one, come to that.

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN
London Observer

Yet if doctors at least had not suppressed their primeval squeamishness, a good many of us would not be alive now.

On a subject so fraught with tricky implications, a vague feeling of distaste is not enough; we have to work out what the issues really are, for us, for the doctors, for everybody.

And we have to unstick our own prejudices. We have to go through every sentence making the emotional unemotional, and giving the bare fact feeling. Every time we read "corpse" we should try saying "the body of my lover".

Every time we think "the body of my child" we should add "that will be decaying in a few days anyway", and when someone says "heart transplant", we should try saying "lives".

Every time we trust the doctors, and think of them as kind Olympians saving life, we must also imagine a wet Saturday evening in a minor hospital during a 'flu epidemic, and see how well the law works then; and every time we think of the "transplanters" getting at our bodies, we should take out the word transplant and put in "a mother of small children who will soon die without a transplant". And it is these people, after all, that the fuss is really all about.

The vague shudder we all feel actually covers two quite different fears, and they would need quite different protection under law. There is the fear that if someone else wanted your kidneys, you would be allowed to die sooner than you otherwise might, or worse still, cut into while still just living.

And quite apart from this, there is the strong feeling that many people have about the sanctity of bodies however dead. Some religions hold that what happens to the body affects what happens to the soul, but there are plenty of people who take no such view, yet who still think of a body as sacrosant.

You may think they are right or you may think they are crazy but they have a civil right to their point of view. Any change in the law to make transplants easier would have to reckon with both forms of reluctance.

What's the practical problem?

Not as many transplants are being done as could be, because with the law as it stands it is difficult to get enough kidneys, livers and so on donated. This is doubly unfortunate, because more means better: the more you have the better the chances are of matching the organ to the person it is going to (tissue-typing) and so getting a successful result.

On the other hand, some people are worried that they may be cut up after death without their consent, or have their deaths hurried along a bit by over-zealous surgeons.

How can we be certain that a transplant "donor" is really dead?

The Committee that advised the British Minister of Health last year suggested that if there was any question of a transplant, death should be certified by two doctors, neither connected with the transplant team and one at least five years qualified; (as with lunatics, when the public might distrust one doctor, it quaintly places faith in two). This would certainly prevent a cringing houseman being overborne by a great truculent transplanter, but it leaves two problems unsolved.

What about the patient on resuscitation?

Generally, people seem most worried about the person in a coma, with what is thought to be irreversible brain damage, his death has, as it were, to be decided upon by switching off the extraordinary means of support.

In a letter to the London Daily Express, a Mrs. Cox said that her daughter had been declared to have irreversible brain damage, that the doctors had wanted to switch off the respirator, that she had insisted that it stay on and that the girl was now alive and well and living in Dorset. The doctors denied they had said she had irreversible brain damage, but such possibilities are undoubtedly worrying.

But it's important to remember that these decisions are taken daily all over the country without any reference to transplants. Mrs. Cox unwittingly outlined the problem in her letter when she said that "the decision to give up the life of a patient should never be made."

But if that was our policy, in 20 years' time the country would be cluttered with barely breathing corpses, and half the nation's manpower and resources would be devoted to keeping them going, which is even more horrifying than Frankenstein.

How do you define the moment of death?

Bluntly, you cannot. There is no one thing which gives you a straight yes or no answer. Electroencephalographs can show flat readings for days in some sort of coma. Hearts can be massaged back into life.

They are working on changes in retina vessels as a sign of death, but none of it is infallible: in the end, it is simply a decision a doctor has to take: that this patient will never function spontaneously again.

Geoffrey Spencer, head of the intensive care unit at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, said "the only acceptable limited definition of death is that it is an irreversible cessation of spontaneous activity in all the tissues of the body. But there is no point in transplanting a dead organ. The point is that different parts of the body die and deteriorate at different rates."

In practice, what defines death is often the law — in Switzerland it is cessation of brain activity, in Sweden the beating of the heart.

This makes heart transplants illegal in Sweden because a successful heart transplant requires you get a heart beating again by whatever artificial means. Lest this should be taken as too exemplary of the Swedes, it is worth recording that when Professor Bjoerk suggested that brain activity be substituted for heart activity, as a criterion of death, the director of the Swedish Medical Board, Dr. Rexed, said not yet, and that in the meantime Sweden would benefit from the results of operations performed abroad. Charming.

What safeguards can there be about death then?

When people were worried about being buried alive, they left instructions in their wills to have their arteries severed; at least if you have had a transplant you will not wake up in your coffin. In the end, there is nothing for it but trust in the doctor who looks after the patient. This is why it is crucial that he never be the same man as the one who does the transplant. The transplanter would probably make exactly the same decisions—but a patient must know his doctor has nothing to gain from having him dead.

What about murders?

A coroner is compelled by statute to hold an inquest on an accident victim, but he can give consent to the removal of an organ from such a one, and take the doctor's word for it about the state of the corpse. How much he does so seems to depend on the coroner concerned, some of whom co-operate more than others.

What about the care of the dying?

What, indeed. Reputable doctors think it is horrifying to drag a dying person across country to be near a recipient, and some transplanters make a point of taking the recipient to the donor.

But in the recent heart transplant in London where a dying nurse was taken to Guy's Hospital, it was far from clear that she would have been moved there but for the transplant proposed.

It is an open question whether it might be made illegal to move a dying patient for transplant purposes (hard to prove) or whether public opinion should concentrate on making the British Medical Association take a grip on its members.

There is the further question of taking tests on the dying to find out if they will fit the recipient; it's not a pleasant thought and obviously there ought to be a very strict limit on it. Again, perhaps a definition of what was allowable and a pretty strict code of practice could come from doctors themselves.

It is worth noting that if, even wrongly, the idea spreads round that people who were willing to give organs for transplants were being pushed around and subjected to things for which the doctors use this beautiful word "discomfort", people might be a lot less willing to donate. Relations might even start insisting on "bringing him home to die" in the old way—which would surely defeat the object of this and many another exercise.

Under the U.K. Human Tissues Act 1961 it is lawful to take out organs if the deceased agreed or if his relatives agree; "the person lawfully in possession of the body" can authorise removal if there is no reason to think any surviving relative would object.

Partly because it is not clear—who is legally in charge of the body? The hospital? Or the relatives as soon as they hear about it? Does "any surviving relative" mean any close relative, or Aunt Effie in Dunfermline too?

And mainly because of the time factor. If you could stack the livers of the willing in the deep freeze there would be no need to bother about doubtful deathbeds—but you can't. The organs are only any use for a very short time after death—too short, very often, to make much of a search for relatives practicable. This is especially so in the case of accident victims, who make some of the best donors, since they were often young and fit before the crash.

How do you get more donors without infringing people's rights?

There are several ways, and they all have snags.

1. You could say that anybody's organs could be taken, unless there was any reason to think that the deceased or close family would object, and have a central register of objections. But how would you register them?

The likeliest bet is a computer, manned day and night to be consulted by telephone; but apart from the computer's expense there is the problem of identification: there are 17,000 John Smiths in Britain with no other initial.

Another possibility is a medical card or bracelet which you carry, recording your objections if you have them—but do people really carry such cards around all the time unless they have to?

You could have a tiny tattoo mark, perhaps—but that kind of thing can be dangerous: you only need to have a religious group known to be against transplants (like Orthodox Jews) and some discrimination against that group going on, and the tattoo becomes a brand and a handicap. Also whatever bit of you it is tattooed on may well not survive the accident that kills you.

2. You could try to build up a record, not of people who have opted out of being donors, but of people who are willing. Two snags here: all the problems of central registration and identification as above, plus serious doubts as to whether you'd get enough volunteers to make much difference.

People whose bodies would most be wanted, would be unlikely to get around to thinking about what should happen to their bodies any more than they rush out and make wills in the ordinary way. The best hope might be to try to rope in people in blocks—do recruiting drives at schools, welfare clinics and so on.

3. You could have a central register where the willing and the objector could record their views. They would still have the basic difficulty of registration, plus a further uncertainty about what happens to the ones who have not registered. "He never said he wanted it done, so I suppose he didn't" might be the line taken by relations.

What is the situation in other countries?

In France, death is confirmed by two doctors, and organs can be taken, even for reasons of therapeutic "interest", without consulting any relative. In South Africa there are new laws under way, one of them would still require consent by relatives (though the relations of Christiaan Barnard's third heart donor were not even told).

In the United States, things are complicated as always by the difference between states, but they are working on a Uniform Anatomical Gift Act which provides for bodies being offered; removal of organs without such permission would still be actionable. Some groups are trying to have death redefined in relations to brain death only.

Has the press made the whole situation more difficult?

The transplanters complain that people have been put off allowing the organs of their dead to be used by the fear of publicity, and it has been suggested in South Africa, for instance, that it should be made illegal to publish donors' names. But that is risky.

Suppose, for example, that all Dr. Barnard's recipients had been white, all his donors black, would it be right to make it illegal to print the evidence?

Cutting into "donor" for organ

It is all very well for Dr. Donald Ross, the British heart surgeon, to say that "experience should be shared on an informed level by those participating and not on a public and emotional level"—it is the public whose organs he needs. The best hope is that the publicity will die down when transplants are more common—remember all those hole-in-the-heart babies?

There are no easy answers to this one. You cannot sweep away human rights, however unreasonable; you cannot just decide it is all too difficult and forbid transplants to go on at all. But perhaps we come nearer to hashing out an answer if we remember that a computer to register central objections, though expensive, would not be so much more expensive than transplants themselves.

We must remember that the kind of person to benefit from a transplant is not some failing ancient who could be allowed to die in peace, but often someone in the prime of life, with responsibilities and people who will be desolated if he dies.

We have to ask ourselves whether it is reasonable to expect 100 per cent perfection in this, as we do not in other things—amputation is not made illegal, after all, because we've all heard of people who had the wrong leg cut off in hospital.

And we should take a very long, skeptical look at what happens abroad, not to throw us into a state of hysteria in which we instantly forbid anybody to do anything but to remember that no profession is composed of archangels and that safeguards are vital.

BE HAPPY, GET WIRED!

The Manchester Guardian

MADRID — A Spanish scientist has revealed here that he has made people happier and friendlier through tiny remote-controlled electrodes lodged under their skin.

Dr. Jose Maria Rodriguez Delgado, now a professor of physiology at Yale University, said in a lecture at Madrid's Paz Hospital last weekend that his discovery would soon be used in treating mental patients.

The invention consists of small electronic devices inserted under the skin of the head, which are activated by radio transmissions to stimulate electrically specific areas of the brain.

After successful experiments with animals, Dr. Rodriguez Delgado said, he also managed to produce certain moods and feelings at will in human volunteers.

The experimental subjects, responding to radio signals transmitted by the professor, reportedly experienced pleasure, disgust, happiness and fear, and became loquacious or mute, friendlier or more aggressive.

In tests with animals, the doctor claimed, he had "taught" them to utilize mechanical devices that would normally be beyond their mental capabilities or powers of concentration.

Dr. Rodriguez Delgado claimed his experiments demonstrated the therapeutic possibilities of his system, and suggested that it might be used to alleviate extreme pain, overcome involuntary movements and correct undesirable alternations of conduct.

The system was successfully tested extensively in monkeys and chimpanzees, according to the Yale professor, to determine its possible long-range side effects and to determine if personality or conduct patterns could be modified over an extended period of time without harming the subjects.

The physiologist admitted that his discovery opened the door to grave moral questions, and to a dispute about interfering with man's free will.

"For that very reason," he said, "We investigators must have an ethical conscience. Precisely because we have the power to influence the minds of our patients, we should respect their personalities more than ever before."

Their Choice as Canadians

By ART STOTT

Stott

Late evening brings a measure of silence to the summer lake. The drone of outboards dies. The shouts of children dwindle and fade away. Lights in tree-shrouded cottages slash a yellow glow in the rectangles of windows. At the head of the lake the hills darken in deepening blue. After the busy afternoon comes a time for repose. So Canada's national day draws to its close on the small beach at Cigarmakers' Bay.

★ ★ ★

It started early, while the mists were still lifting from the surface of the water and quiet fishermen trolled with only the soft drip of oars marking their slow progress.

As the sun lifted over the small mountain we call Old Stick, the children came to the water side, cheerfully noisy in play that changes little with the years. Then came the speedboats and their tows of water skiers, sweeping across the wakes of their boats and lifting rooster tails as they swerved. So passed the daylight hours, with an occasional fisherman venturing out before sunset, slowing the tempo for the descending dusk. On the roads and trails couples walked, breathing in air scented by conifers, noting the small changes that had taken place in the accustomed scene.

A hammer beat the uncertain rhythm of a muffled drum as some tired cabin builder finished a task in fading light.

These were the sounds and sights familiar to the lake dwellers, a pattern of life, recreation and simple labors conventional in the locality. So a community observed and enjoyed the anniversary of a date when a nation was born.

There were no spectacular displays of patriotism, no bands playing, no parades for them. The people were doing what they wished to do. They were Canadians being Canadians.

No rhetoric from a bunting-decked platform, no fireworks lifting into darkening skies, no emotional appeal to the drama of a country's history and tradition, marked the occasion.

Yet, to a man resting on the small beach, the course of the day at the lake seemed more Canadian than any synthetic program could have made it.

Being Canadian, he thought, involved no frantic waving of flags. Being Canadian permitted a person freedom to do as he wanted.

★ ★ ★

If he could return to the natural scene, find pleasure in simple enjoyments, watch children carefree in their games, take satisfaction from the early morning by the water and find relaxation in the calm of the hour after the sun had slipped behind western hills, he could know a feeling for his country more enduring than the eloquence of politicians and statesmen could produce.

He could count his blessings and find high among them a way of life that allowed the individual to chose his own way of observing the national holiday.

★ ★ ★

He could note the boy, come recently to fishing, who trolls on water that is free for his use. He could see the start of trails running from the lakeside road up hills open for his exploration. He could move through the bush, catching glimpses of wildlife that still runs at will.

He knows that his is a country with great open spaces, regions where the smoke and crowding of the cities can be escaped, where, within reasonable bounds, he may do as he pleases. He may yet drink from a mountain stream.

The man sitting by the lake shore has seen change come, has seen the swamp willow by the water cleared away for more cottages, has seen the speedboat take over from the canoe and skiff. He is aware that the light from windows no longer owes its source to an oil lamp, that taps run in houses where water was once packed by the bucket.

But in the quiet of late evening, he is aware that the basic character of the land he cherishes has been preserved. The lofty trees raise spires into the thickening gloom. An owl sends its soft tremulo through the woods. The cooling air carries the fragrance of pine and cedar.

★ ★ ★

This is the place where he chose to spend a nation's birthday in the manner which appealed to him most. He is no less a Canadian because his ears have escaped the rolling syllables of a platform speaker.

He is probably more the Canadian because he has not been crammed shoulder to shoulder with others in a state-designed ceremony where the expected words have been uttered, but the feeling for country has been left in doubt.

Freak Copper Find Turned To Pure Gold for Mechanic

By DON MacLACHLAN

PEACHLAND, B.C. (CP) — Bob Bechtel, a $350-a-month school bus mechanic, was spending another weekend off in his usual way when he spotted what looked like a streak of rust on an old, bushed-in wagon road.

"When a prospector sees something like that he starts looking. I did and I could see these blue lines of moly and the yellow sulphides of copper. The further I went, the more I could see."

Pretty soon, he found an area of exposed ore that looked good. He later staked four claims at a fee of $2.50 apiece. Then he started doing the required $100 worth of annual development work to keep each claim alive.

That was in 1954, and he wasn't sure that the low-grade ore would ever be worth mining. Now, centred smack on his four claims, is the $60,000,000 copper-molybdenum mine of Brenda Mines Ltd.

"Holy old baldhead," exclaimed the Penticton, B.C., prospector, sitting in his air-conditioned four-wheel-drive vehicle. "They all said there was nothing in the Okanagan but I had a feeling there was."

There was indeed. Brenda says its estimated 177,000,000 tons of copper and molybdenum ore should last 21 years. Development was just a question of when the ore body became economic to work.

GOUGED OUT LAND

The company has gouged out about 950 acres of land in the area of scrub tree and domed hills, their tops smoothed by glacial actions eons ago, about 25 air miles east of Kelowna, B.C.

Start of production was delayed by labor strife and now is expected in October or November. Copper concentrate will go to Japan.

The mine's concentrator plant can handle 24,000 tons of blast-shattered rock a day, turning out 200 tons of copper concentrate and 25 tons a day of molybdenum concentrate.

Mr. Bechtel, 52, now a weather-beaten field man for Brenda, collected shares worth $750,000 at current market prices. His air-conditioned wagon is one of four vehicles he owns and "I live all right."

He recalls:

"I'd go prospecting on my days off, just hop in the jeep and take off. Nobody was interested in the area at all; they all figured there was nothing there and it was a dead issue.

"But sometimes you think all the opposite to the bigwigs and you don't give up. . . . I'd noticed this old road cutting off and I thought I'd just have a look. The first indication was a bit of rust.

"Actually, I figured that if they made a mine there in 20 years I'd be doing good. It just wasn't worth it. Moly was of no value at all then; you couldn't give the stuff away."

THUMBS WERE DOWN

After he found the ore, he tried to get companies interested "but they turned it down several times."

"It was just too low a grade. I knew that but I sort of sensed it might make a mine some day."

Among the companies which turned thumbs down on the area was Noranda Mines Ltd., which later changed its mind and now operates the mine. It has extensive claims on adjacent land as well.

Copper prices have climbed since Mr. Bechtel made his discovery and uses have been found for molybdenum in alloys and lubricants. Still, Brenda says the grade of ore is so low the mine is really a gamble.

"The safety margin here is tight," said a spokesman in Vancouver. "This is no Texas Gulf or what have you. Things could be upset quite easily." Profit estimates were not disclosed.

Brenda President B. O. Brynelsen and associates put up some early money. Financing now comes from Noranda, the Bank of Nova Scotia, Nippon Mining and Mitsui and Co. of Japan.

Men and machines ripped out more than 8,000,000 tons of rock and overburden to prepare for production. They built dams, diverted streams, hauled in costly equipment and assembled it on the site.

On Brenda's 3,400-acre lease area, a 425-acre section has been gouged out for the pit and plant site, another 250 acres for tailings disposal and a further 275 acres for a water-storage lake.

A $2,250,000 power line was strung in 40 miles from Merritt, B.C. The two $280,000 blasting drills and two $550,000 shovels, which handle 11 cubic yards of rock at a scoop, are electrically powered.

BLAST OFF TERRACE

The pit area, measuring 2,400 feet by 2,000, is toward the top of a 5,500-foot hill. Crews will work down, blasting off 50-foot terraces and carting the rock to the plant in 11 100-ton trucks, each of which cost $220,000. They stand three storeys tall.

Eventually, says chief mining engineer Bill Allan, the area will be restored. The pit will become a man-made lake with a backdrop of the huge terraced cliff from which the ore was blasted.

In a continuing storm of controversy and concern in British Columbia about reclamation and restoration of scarred mining areas, Mr. Allan said: "This place will be in better shape than when we came here."

Arctic Draws Oil Spies

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The job of a prying oil scout, known these days as industrial espionage, has taken on a new dimension in the world's hottest petroleum spot, the Arctic slope of Alaska.

There's no way he can peek from behind a tree—there are no trees on the tundra.

The natural barriers to picking up information are aided by some of the tightest security measures ever practised in the oil industry.

Alaska's commissioner of natural resources, Thomas E. Kelly, himself an old hand in the business, says security is "about as stringent as you can make it."

An example of how tight is the way Kelly's agency handles information which companies are required to submit but which the state must keep secret for two years.

The data is placed in double-lock safes in banks, and Kelly's men either pore over it there or take it back to their offices for only the time needed to study it. When the latter is done, two men handle the transportation of the information.

TAKE NO CHANCES

Kelly says that when the time comes to take a sample at a drilling site, all but the essential personnel are cleared from the platform. Then a courier flies the material directly to his company's headquarters. And if headquarters thinks its men in Alaska need to know anything about the analysis, the information is sent back here.

It's fairly easy to seal off the sites on the north slope—it's nearly 400 miles north of Fairbanks, and the only way to get there at this time of year is by air.

Anyone landing without authorization on one of the gravel strips is usually told to turn around and high-tail it out.

Scouts must resort to such things as studying the reports issued by Kelly's department and keeping an eye on things at the Anchorage and Fairbanks airports.

They see which specialists from competing companies are coming into town. At Fairbanks they keep a watch on the supplies being loaded aboard huge cargo planes.

NO SNEEZING WHEN NEAR GOLD

QUESNEL, B.C. (CP) — It is not true that some people sneeze when they get near gold, says Chew Duck Sing, and he ought to know.

Mr. Chew is the last private gold buyer in the famed Barkerville-Quesnel area.

The largest city west of Chicago and north of San Francisco at the time, Barkerville built its fame on gold—but that was in the 19th century.

Using scales dating back 200 years, Mr. Chew handles about 700 transactions a year. He deals mainly with a few old-timers who still pan for gold.

Mr. Chew said his father worked in the Barkerville gold fields when the central B.C. frontier town was at its peak.

"While I was born in China, my father later brought me over. I went to school and grew up at Barkerville."

He bought a general store here in 1947 and inherited the gold business carried on in the store.

"There used to be a few others in Quesnel who bought gold but I am the only one left now," he said.

Mr. Chew never asks the prospectors where their gold comes from—an unwritten but vital rule in the business. "If they tell me, that's their business. I don't ask."

While there is still gold to be found in the area, Mr. Chew does not recommend trying to make a living at it. "It's hard work and not much to be found for the effort."

Ft. St. John Petroleums Profits Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fort St. John Petroleums Ltd. had net profit of $90,000 for its first quarter of 1969 compared with $35,911 for the whole of 1968, company president M. J. Walton told the annual meeting Monday.

He said he could not give any comparable figures for the first quarter of 1968 because at that time the company did not own Vigas Propane Inc. which had contributed strongly to the latest profit figures. Vigas Propane was acquired in September, 1968.

Mr. Walton also reported Vancouver Island Gas Co. Ltd. continues to make progress and in 1968 recorded the highest gross revenues in its history.

Fort St. John owns 92 per cent of Vancouver Island Gas.

Vigas Propane serves tank users on Vancouver Island and is a subsidiary of Vancouver Island Gas which serves customers, mostly in the Nanaimo area, through mains.

Taking in the company's acquisitions, revenue for 1968 was $914,529 compared with restated revenue of $383,478 in 1967. Earnings were $35,911 as against $25,581 the previous year.

BANK OF B.C. IN STEP, LENDING RATE HIKED

VANCOUVER (CP)— — The Bank of British Columbia Monday got in step with the five major chartered banks which raised their prime lending rates and deposit interest Friday.

The Bank of British Columbia raised its prime rate from 8 per cent to 8½ per cent and its interest on non-chequing savings accounts from 6¼ per cent to 6½ per cent.

"We have such a steady demand for loans that if we had left our rates lower than the other banks, we couldn't have handled it," said president Albert Hall.

TRUTH-IN-LENDING LAW IN FORCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The truth-in-lending law went into effect Tuesday, enabling consumers in the United States to know at the outset how much credit will cost.

For the first time, under the law signed by President Johnson last year, lenders will be required to furnish potential borrowers with complete information on how much credit will cost, with a statement of the interest charge.

It no longer will be permissible, for example, to advertise a $300 television set for $20 down and $10 weekly payments. The ad will have to say how long the payments must be made and what the TV set will have cost when the final payment is made.

The law exempts business and commercial credit, except agricultural credit, and credit of more than $25,000, except real estate transactions.

The Federal Trade Commission will be the primary enforcement agency.

Alderman Broome will break the first ground in the public plaza area and Premier Bennett will lay in place the first tile of the public plaza.

Currency Flexibility Aim Of U.S. Economic Leaders

By NORA BELOFF
The London Observer

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's chief monetary advisers are coming around to the view that the dollar is currently overvalued.

They are also inclined to believe that the almost implacably fixed exchange rates; set up under the Bretton Woods system in 1944, are incompatible with economic growth, and full employment.

The authorities here believe that, if there were a voluntary boost of allegedly undervalued currencies; notably German, Italian, Swiss and Dutch (they would like to include the Japanese; but recognize they would not co-operate), neither the U.S. dollar nor the British pound sterling would need to be devalued. They feel disinclined to make predictions about the staying power of the franc so soon after the French elections.

They would like to induce the Europeans to accept a general realignment toward more realistic exchange rates, which could subsequently lead to more flexible relationships. Most senior officials hope this could be done without a free-floating exchange rate recommended by some American economists, but which those in authority fear would hamper world trade by introducing an unacceptable level of uncertainty.

American experts are still consulting among themselves about the best way of introducing more flexibility into the system once realignment is agreed. They hope to hammer out an agreed policy in time to present it to their trading partners at the International Monetary Fund conference in the autumn. The general inclination seems to be towards a system which would allow for gradual adjustment of exchanges.

A favorable view is being taken of the idea of the crawling peg, first advocated by Sir Roy Harrod. Under this, each government would continue to declare central parity, but there would be automatic regulations to allow this to move steadily upward or downward over an agreed period instead of shifting; as at present; only very rarely but by large amounts.

There would be an agreed limit by which the official rate of any particular currency could rise or fall and which would be calculated in accordance with how its market rate had fluctuated in the preceding few months.

Speculators would then know that the currencies would not fluctuate wildly. Indeed, if interest rates were appropriately adjusted, it could be rewarding to hold, for example, downward crawling sterling as to hold upward-crawling Deutsche marks.

The American authorities see no reason why all countries should have to try out a new system simultaneously. They believe sterling, and those currencies pegged to sterling, might alone initiate a move toward the crawling peg, as these are most prone to suffer from speculative pressures snd the international dread of sudden collapse. The U.S. officials claim that Argentina and Brazil, which already have the crawling peg, have proved the system can work.

MILITARY BURDENS

The new economic team at the White House and treasury department has abandoned the belief of its predecessors that the strains on the American balance of payments are merely temporary; resulting from exceptionally high military burdens.

The Administration economists contend that, in normal trading terms, American prices are getting out of line. They are failing to earn the surplus they need to pay for international involvements which will survive even after the Vietnam war is over.

Universities Scored For Playing Politics

Ceilings Unnecessary Says Deputy

By BOB MITCHELL

B.C. universities are using enrolment restrictions as a political lever to exert pressure on the government, the deputy minister of education said today.

Dr. Neil Perry was commenting on the announcement this week the University of Victoria will hold its first-year enrolment to 2,000 students through implementation of a system of priorities for university entrance.

The University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University recently announced they would guarantee admission to Grade 12 students with an average of 65 per cent or better.

CONTINGENCY CLAUSE

Dr. Perry said the issue stems from the fact that the government can withhold five per cent of its operating grants to the universities until November.

At that time, since operating grants are based on each institution's projected enrolment, the actual number of students is compared with the projected figure.

If enrolment at a university turns out to be less than expected, the minister of education could conceivably authorize the last five per cent of a school's operating budget be spent elsewhere.

Dr. Perry described the withholding measure as a "contingency arrangement."

'AWKWARD THING'

"The awkward thing, however, is that the universities are developing postures.

"By introducing enrolment restrictions they're making it into a political issue, perhaps to the detriment of parents who would like to send their children to university."

He said the government would "sit and watch to see what developments arise out of the situation."

Education Minister Donald Brothers, on vacation this week, could not be reached for comment.

Uvic announced June 6 it would hold undergraduate enrolment at 5,200 during the 1969-70 session because its $10.5 million operating grant was $1.5 million less than requested.

UBC registrar J. E. A. Parnall and Uvic registrar Ronald Ferry had both expressed confidence their institutions will be able to accommodate all new students with a high school average of 60 per cent or better.

OBVIOUSLY PERTURBED

Uvic president-elect Dr. Bruce Partridge, in office for the first time today, said he was "obviously perturbed" by the government's handling of the operating grants.

"It means the universities can't continue to do their job as they see it."

He said the universities need better public relations to let taxpayers know what their needs are.

Storm Knocks Out Power, Sets Cottage on Fire

An early-morning thunder storm cut power line, blocked a driveway and is believed to have started a $2,500 cottage fire today.

Lightning apparently started the fire, at 8450 Lawrence in Central Saanich, when it hit a television antenna on a tree four feet from a cottage owned by Mrs. Dorothy Lorenzen about 3:20 a.m.

Firemen said the cottage was about 40 feet from the main house. When they arrived, the tree was burning but the television antenna was gone.

The roof was burned off the 10 by 14-foot cottage, and the interior destroyed.

Oak Bay firemen had an easier job.

They were called this morning to remove a tree, felled by lightning, and blocking a driveway at 2431 Bowker. Another tree was knocked over at 1989 Hampshire.

★ ★ ★

B.C. Hydro units this morning repaired a main transmission line knocked out during the storm. Residents of the Mill Bay-Cobble Hill area were without power from 3:56 a.m. until the line was fixed at 8:10.

Most of the action was north of the city proper. At the airport, rainfall was .1 inch. Tillicum had .06 and downtown at Gonzales. .01 was recorded.

—Robin Clarke photo.

SMASHED beneath a tree which it bowled over as it went out of control early Tuesday at Esquimalt Road and Alston, is car in which driver William Ferguson, 21, of 708 Suffolk, and three passengers were injured. Most seriously hurt was Ronald Carlson, 19, of CFB Esquimalt, who is in good condition in hospital today with neck and rib injuries. Police said Ferguson was driving west when the car mounted the curb and travelled 173 feet before striking tree which snapped and fell back on car.

Assessor Accused Of 'Painful' Cure

By PAT DUFOUR

Apartments in Oak Bay have been under-assessed, while homes with large grounds have been overtaxed.

The inequalities were investigated by Oak Bay council Monday night.

WATTS

Homeowners with large lots complained their assessments were too high. They were based on the value of the property if the land were subdivided and sold.

Apartments were assessed by frontage feet, rather than by square footage.

"It is an anachronism and failure to keep up with the times," said Ald. Douglas Watts.

Municipal assessor D. C. Wyatt said he had tried "to cure the ills of two years" in one fell swoop.

Said Ald. Scott Wallace, "You went by the letter of the book. You fixed it. But in the most painful manner."

Wyatt said 1966 assessments had not been perfect, but satisfactory, and blamed the provincial five-per-cent ceiling on individual increases during the past two years for this year's huge increase.

Mayor Fred Hawes said it was up to council to approve future subdivision. The assessor was in no position to decide and also, the owners might never wish to subdivide.

"It points out the unfairness on council of not having liaison with our assessor. We must be closer and know when these changes are contemplated. It is not enough to just pay his salary."

PROPERTY LIST

The assessor admitted closer consultation was necessary. "I am preparing a list of large properties for the 1970 roll. There is room for correction in this matter."

Assessments on large properties varied. Wyatt said the reason was a higher cost of servicing potential subdivisions on some of these properties.

Watts said several apartment buildings were undertaxed in relation to the land they occupy. He suggested a square footage assessment would be fairer.

The assessor said he would like to use that method, but would like approval from the provincial assessor first. Victoria uses square feet to assess apartment buildings.

PARKING LOTS

Watts suggested that the square-foot method should also be applied to commercial properties.

"The days are gone when stores relied on front footage and had junk yards at the back. Now stores are supplying off-street parking that uses much of their sites. They're penalized by the foot frontage taxation."

The assessor explained that the 1969 assessment roll was based on market sales during 1966, 1967 and part of 1968. Land and improvements related to these figures were assessed at 50 per cent of market value. But the time the court of revision was held in February assessments were only 34.33 of the true market value.

Ald. Alex Hendry said the court of revision chairman had been at fault when he had asked homeowners appealing their assessment whether they would sell for twice the assessment value.

He told Wyatt: "It should have been more like a third. I would have thought it was your duty to have pointed that out to the chairman."

'Gov't Welched' On Cool-Aid

Ald. G. Scott Wallace Monday accused the provincial government of "welching on its deal with Cool-Aid."

At a council meeting he criticized the government's decision to give the agency food vouchers instead of the $3,060 cash grant as originally agreed.

Council decided to ask Garth Homer of the Victoria Welfare Council to give a report on the activities of the local, youth self-help organization.

Saanich mayor and intermunicipal committee chairman Hugh Curtis said today a review of the municipal grant to Cool-Aid is in order, in light of the provincial government's change of policy.

The municipalities agreed to match the provincial government's $3,060 grant but "whether it is on a dollar-to-dollar basis hasn't been established," he said.

Meanwhile, Saanich and the Islands MLA John Tisdalle said he conducted a private investigation of Cool-Aid in April and recommended an investigation of the organization to Welfare Minister Dan Campbell.

"I didn't recommend a suspension of their money without an inquiry," he said, adding: "I would say that if a suspension was the result of my report, it would be right."

Arrest Follows Hospital Fire

A 53-year-old woman is under observation at the Royal Jubilee Hospital Bay Pavilion following a fire at Sidney's Resthaven Hospital Monday.

RCMP said today a woman was taken into custody after a blaze broke out in the basement washroom of the hospital.

A bottle of solvent had been wrapped in waxpaper and set on a ledge of a grill-covered window.

The flames set off three sprinklers.

●

Thomas Bradley, hospital administrator, said just before the fire a woman was seen entering the hospital through the emergency entrance.

He said as soon as he smelled smoke he told his staff to stand by while he ran to the basement.

"I could see the sprinkler system had taken care of the fire so there was no need to call for evacuation," he said. "The nearest patients were two floors away from the fire scene."

Couple to Quit Ocean Troughs For Foothills

Brig. Miles Smeeton, whose 45-foot Bermuda ketch Tzu Hang has sailed 100,000 miles in round-the-world trips in 19 years, says he's ashore to stay.

Tzu Hang tied up in the Inner Harbor Monday after a cruise which began here in September, 1966.

Says Smeeton, "We're all getting too old. I don't want to end up doing less and less each year."

He and his wife Beryl are 63, their Siamese cat Pwe, 16, and Tzu Hang, 31.

●

The Smeetons "plan to build a house somewhere, probably in the Rockie foothills where we have some range land."

On this trip they rounded Cape Horn, east to west, in a record 14 days. The only two other yachts to round in that direction are the American 77-foot pilot schooner Wanderer and Al Hansen's sloop, which rounded in 1936. He drowned when his ship was wrecked off the Chilean coast.

The east to west rounding of Cape Horn is considered the most dangerous but for the Smeetons it proved uneventful.

Smeeton was all smiles today when he reported their successful rounding, details of which he intends to make the subject of another book.

He said: "It's great to finish on a high note."

American Trio Arrested After Rash of Robberies

Three Washington State men were to appear in court today following cash thefts totalling $224 from three area shops over the last two days.

Men ages 22, 23, and 28—face two Saanich charges of theft over $50, one city charge of theft under $50, and one Colwood charge of attempted theft.

Two women arrested at the same time have not been charged. One, a Canadian, age 18, was released and the other, from the U.S., is being held by immigration authorities for deportation, police said.

Colwood RCMP and Saanich police combined forces about 9 p.m. Tuesday to find the men after a Colwood shop reported an attempted theft.

Police said three men entered Reid's Low Cost, 304 Goldstream, and one attempted to take a $5 bill. The proprietor grabbed the money back and the trio fled.

About three hours before that incident, three men entered Phyl's Confectionery, 3588 Quadra. The owner told police he was serving two of the men when the third opened the cash register till and took $60.

He told Saanich officers the group fled in a car with Washington licence plates.

HELD ONE MAN

The men have also been charged with the theft of about $150 from Lee and Sons Food Market, 4085 Quadra. Police said the theft was not noticed until later Tuesday by the owner of the store.

In the city incident police said $14 was taken Monday from Willy's Variety Store, 1307 Gladstone. Owner Henry Wilby told police he was distracted by one of three men who came in while another took the money from the till.

Wilby told police he noticed the theft and held one of the men. After an argument the man left and returned 15 minutes later with the money.

The men were arrested about 9 p.m. at the Langford Pool Hall, near Goldstream and Millstream Roads.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IN THE END, IT IS THE taxpayers who decide how much they can afford to spend on civic improvement. Victoria taxpayers looked uneasily at a five-year budget calling for $5,588,000, and last Saturday gave it the boot.

If that same program is presented to them unchanged next spring I expect it will be kicked out again.

With this in mind, I suggest that Victoria City Council would do well to set its collective teeth, pick up its rejected program, and squeeze like the very devil.

★

The end result should be a budget reduced to such items as Victorians still smarting from their last property tax boost can't get along without.

It would be nice to spend close to $1 million on city parks. Any way you look at it, traffic congestion would be eased by increased off-street parking facilities and improved funnelling of the car-swarm at a total cost of $2.8 million or thereabouts.

But somebody has to pay for such massive public works. The Saturday vote, and also the highly significant non-vote, indicates that Victorians aren't willing to foot the bill.

★

Not right now at least, and certainly not to the extent that the planners envisioned.

Perhaps in some later year, when such pressing issues as regional hospitals and sewage disposal have been straightened away, the mood will change.

Today, the Victoria taxpayer and his neighbors in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt are more concerned with holding their own in dubious times than with putting out for the dream-city of the future.

This may be a hard lesson for their local governments to learn. But failure to accept and heed it will mean more money votes tossed back at those who frame them.

IF YOU ARE - TRUE - married and hope most earnestly to remain in that state, take inspiration from Rev. and Mrs. Edward F. Church of 2705 Tudor Road. Last Sunday, the retired minister and his lady celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary.

So did about 150 friends and well-wishers, of whom my dear one and I made two. When we arrived, Rev. and Mrs. Church were receiving congratulations from Her Majesty, Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C Bennett and other notables.

★

The fat sheaf of letters and telegrams was read aloud by the couple's son, Dr. E. J. M. Church of Edmonton. Then we all filed past the chairs in which the bride and groom of 1909 sat side by side in a flower-decked Cadboro Bay United Church Hall.

That hall, by the way, carries this remarkable pastor's name on a bronze exterior plaque. After a career of service that began in Toronto and brought him west to Vancouver, he and his wife came here to retire. Within three years of their arrival, Mr. Church was leading a congregation that met in Cadboro Bay Scout Hall.

★

Later, with his zeal and drive to help, came the building of the Arbutus Road hall in which the pair sampled their outsized anniversary cake.

Retired once more, Mr. Church gave due credit to his wife for the recipe from which so unduring a marriage was baked.

Love and loyalty, he said, seasoned with a dash of humor.

DURABLE JERRY Gosley's Smile Show is off and running at Langham Court Theatre, with a moon-landing by astronauts among its capers old and new. This lively turn is helped along by a clever set which Jerry's young son, Anton, assisted by Peter Knox, worked hard to prepare.

★

If all goes well with the real-life astronauts who will attempt a moon landing this month, the act stays. Otherwise, it gets yanked, and fast.

If you've never caught this hearty hometown show, or if you happen to be a visitor in search of evening entertainment, the Gosley music hall is worth investigating.

Nice touch at the opening: Bill Hosie, a braw lad wi' a Scottish song, persuading his dad in the audience to sing a chorus.

Worst act: An airy-fairy bit that should get the chop. Not because it's sick. Just dreary.

A DISHEARTENED RYUN CANCELS TRACK TRIP

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jim Ryun, the mile record-holder, said Tuesday he had cancelled a planned European trip and all other track competition during the current season.

The announcement here came two days after the 22-year-old Kansan failed to complete a mile run in the N.Y. National AAU meet in Miami on Sunday. It was the fourth time this year he had walked off a track and failed to finish a major race.

Ryun said he was not thinking of retirement, but that if he should plan to retire "I'll make the announcement when the time comes."

Ryun said he was physically ready for the AAU meet, but that his failure was mental.

"When you compete for several years in a sport that requires great mental effort, you can't help being tired mentally once in a while, especially after an Olympic year," he said.

Ryun had planned to leave Monday for meets in Zurich and West Berlin.

Currier Wins Foster Trophy At Western

John Currier added a small measure of insult to injury while edging favored Mel Marshall by half a car length to win the third annual Billy Foster Stock Car 100 race Tuesday night at Western Speedway.

Currier, who started in 15th position out of a field of 33 cars to qualify Sunday, captured the lead in the 67th lap before 3,340 fans and staved off strong challenges the rest of the way to take the checkered flag.

The car that Currier drove to victory was the same one that Marshall owned last year. Marshall led the qualifying field.

George Lacey held the front-running spot for the first 29 laps before being passed by Mike Armstrong, who led to the 41st.

Barry Davies captured the lead on the 42nd lap only to give way to Currier on the 67th.

From lap 67 to 90, Currier held off stiff challenges by Marshall, Davies and Bill Price.

Price was eliminated when he spun out on the 95th lap and from then to the finish Marshall hugged close behind Currier, hoping for a mistake that never came.

IT WENT SMOOTHY

Track manager Reg Midgley said it was "one of the best races run."

There was not a single restart due to collisions, something unusual for a 100-lap race.

But if accidents were rare in the main race, such was not the case in preliminary bouts.

In the "hot laps" practice for the feature event, Dennis Praud turned turtle and Ron Crawford ended up in the bush after losing a wheel. Both were able to make repairs, however, in time for the feature.

In preliminary competitions for drivers that didn't qualify for the Foster 100, George Anderson and Ted Birtwhistle shared honors, while third-place finishers seemed to have bad luck in succeeding races.

'B' WINNERS

Anderson won both the trophy dash and "B" main while Birtwhistle claimed both the first and second heats.

Gary Madden, who finished third in the dash, wiped out his car after hitting a concrete tower in the first heat but collected no injuries.

Rick Treby finished third in the first heat only to be eliminated in a collision with Sam Alexander during the "B" main.

Next on the Speedway menu is the first National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing—sanctioned super-stock meet in Canada.

Action between the American-based cars, local and mainland entries begins at 7 p.m. Friday and continues Saturday at the same time.

Complete winners:

Trophy dash: 1, George Anderson; 2, Mike Downey; 3, Gary Madden; 4, Rex Colburn.

First heat: 1, Ted Birtwhistle; 2, Rex Colburn; 3, Rick Treby.

Second heat: 1, Ted Birtwhistle; 2, Rex Colburn; 3, Tom Lakeland.

"B" main: 1, George Anderson; 2, Ted Birtwhistle; 3, Rex Colburn.

Billy Foster 100: 1, John Currier; 2, Mel Marshall; 3, Harvey St. Hilaire; 4, Barry Davies; 5, Terry Forsyth.

AT TORONTO

Anne Wins But Bill Big Loser

TORONTO (CP) — The Dominion Day track and field meet, began 10 years ago, may be abandoned by promoter Bill Crothers for lack of attendance.

"I'm very happy with the level of competition at the meet, but the attendance is too bad," Crothers said Tuesday night. He sponsored the meet last year for the first time and lost about $3,000.

Only 376 fans showed up at the Canadian National Exhibition stadium which can seat more than 33,000. Total receipts were $752.

COSTS $9,000

"This two-day event cost me about $9,000 to put on, and with this kind of support, I don't think I can go on," Crothers said.

"A meet like this is important because it brings all top Canadian athletes together to get top-flight competition. We have to force athletes to push themselves and improve the standard so that we get eight top competitors in each event."

On the field, Joan Pavelich, 16, of Vancouver, set a Canadian women's juvenile record in the discus with a toss of 158-3, bettering the record of 151-3 set by Nancy McCredie of Brampton, Ont., in 1962. She also won the shot put with a heave of 43-8¼.

B.C. WINS NINE

In all, British Columbia athletes won nine of the 28 events, including the top three placings in the women's 220-yard run. Anne Langdale of Victoria, won the 220 in 24.5, defeating Irene Piotrowski of Vancouver, holder of the Canadian open and native records in the event with 23.5.

The time was Miss Langdale's best in the 220.

Only one other Victorian—miler Dave Weicker of Oak Bay—is entered. Weicker was scheduled to compete today.

The day was a personal triumph for pole vaulter Bruce Simpson of Toronto, who cleared 16-4, the first time he has broken the 16-foot barrier in competition.

Craig Blackman of Toronto won the high school 440-yard run in 48.4, placed third in the senior 220-yard run in 22.8, and anchored the Scarborough Lions track club, winners of the high school 4 x 110-yard relay in 43.1.

Andy Boychuk of Toronto, winner of a gold medal in the marathon at the 1968 Pan-American Games, won the gruelling six-mile run in 28:50.2.

Mike Cairns of Calgary bettered his own Canadian native shot put record of 190-1 with a heave of 196-11.

The meet concludes today.

U.S. Star Bids For Fourth Title

WIMBLEDON (CP)—Billie Jean King, trying for a record-tying fourth straight win in the women's singles at the All-England lawn tennis championships, today crushed United States teammate Rosemary Casals 6-1, 6-0, in semi-final play.

The defending champion was at the top of her game in eliminating her 20-year-old friend and fellow pro.

Mrs. King next will meet the winner of the day's other semi-final between Australia's powerful Margaret Smith Court and Ann Jones of England. The final will be played Friday.

Mrs. Court defeated Julie Heiman of the U.S. 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 in the quarter-finals Monday.

Similarly, Mrs. King lost the first set to Judy Teggart of Australia before rebounding for a close victory in which she showed flashes of the form that has given her the title for the last three years.

MEN GET REST

While the women are in action, the four men who survived Tuesday's quarter-final singles play get a day of rest before Thursday's semi-finals.

Australian Rod Laver takes on Arthur Ashe, the only American left in the men's singles, while John Newcombe of Australia meets fellow-countrymen Tony Roche.

Laver disposed of Cliff Drysdale of South Africa 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, in 73 minutes Tuesday while Ashe beat Bob Lutz of the U.S. 6-4, 5-2, 4-6, 7-5.

Newcombe eliminated Tom Okker of The Netherlands 8-6, 3-6, 6-1, 7-5 and Roche put out Clark Graebner of the U.S. in a service duel 4-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 11-9.

Tipton Tops At Ski Meet

SHAWNINGAN LAKE — Lake Cowichan's Rod Tipton emerged the big winner Sunday in the men's events at the B.C. open water skiing championships.

Tipton placed first in both the trick and jumping competitions.

Other winners:

Greg Athens, Kelowna, junior tricks and jumping and open barefoot slalom; Roger Teeter, Lake Samanish, men's slalom; Gene Shegland, Lake Samanish, senior slalom; Don Wittenburgh, Peace Arch, senior tricks; Rudy Tuschek, Vancouver, veteran slalom and jumping; Pat Cody, Lake Samanish, women's slalom and jumping.

Pepitone's Argument Draws Fine

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Pepitone has been fined by President Joe Cronin of the American League for his part in a violent argument with umpire Emmett Ashford, New York Yankees said Tuesday night.

The Yankees said the league office had informed them of the fine, but they did not disclose the amount.

The argument took place during the second game of a doubleheader at Cleveland on Sunday.

Ashford said he had to eject Pepitone after the first baseman cursed him and grabbed his arm following a pitch that Ashford called a strike.

Pepitone says he asked for time out and Ashford refused to give it to him.

Shamrocks Get Breathing Room

Trip Carls; 'Bellies Here Tonight

VANCOUVER — The wins aren't coming easily but Victoria Shamrocks continue to cling tenaciously to the hope that they may crack the Western Lacrosse Association's playoff circle.

Coach Tom Druce's Rocks kindled those hopes Tuesday night by shading Vancouver Carlings, 6-5, before 555 fans in Vancouver.

It was only the second victory in 12 starts for Victoria. But Shamrocks are breathing because Vancouver also finds winning is difficult.

The Carls are only four points ahead of Victoria at the half-way point in the campaign.

The Shamrocks get a chance to put more sheen on their hopes tonight in Memorial Arena with second-place New Westminster Salmonbellies visiting. Game time is 8:30.

FORBES, MUNROE READY

Ready to help Victoria's cause are two experienced hands who are scheduled to dress for the first time. Druce said goaltender Barry Forbes and forward Bill Munroe will be in the lineup tonight.

Munroe has heft and scoring know-how.

Forbes has defensive glitter although Druce concedes "goaltending hasn't been our main trouble." He has invariably appreciated the work of Doug Thompson and George Grover but felt inconsistent checking has made their chores difficult.

Goaltending stood up strongly Tuesday as Grover showed his appreciation of a strong checking display by back-stopping the Rocks' first road victory.

That performance earned Grover the starting role tonight and Forbes will be standing in the wings.

SOMNER GETS WINNER

Junior Tom Somner provided the victory margin with a scoring shot that eluded Vancouver's Don Hamilton with less than five minutes left in the game.

Victoria's strong checking, and Grover, withstood Vancouver rushes the rest of the way.

Other Victoria scorers were Bill Spotwood, Nirmal Dillon, Mike Beaulac, Tom Churchill and Jindy Johl.

Vancouver's goals came from Art Dickinson, Bill Rawson, Bill Robinson, Brent O'Janen and Tony Ciolfitto.

Gymnasts Drop Expulsion Issue

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — A Soviet bid to oust South Africa from the International Gymnastics federation failed Monday when the annual conference voted 18-9 not to include the issue on its agenda.

The Russians had proposed the expulsion of South Africa because of its apartheid policies.

The decision means the large South African team is assured of taking part in the fifth world gymnaestrada, which opens here Wednesday.

City Archers Lead the Way

NANAIMO — Bow and arrow artists from Victoria came away with most of the prizes at the Vancouver Island outdoor archery championships.

Cliff Allen of Victoria Seaview Archers put on a record-breaking perormance to establish an outstanding total of 1,307 in the men's freestyle competition.

Allen set an American round mark of 754 x 810 and field round record of 271 x 300 on his way to the aggregate championship.

Fred Usher of Victoria Bowmen was runner-up.

Lee Jones of Victoria's Seaview club captured the ladies' freestyle aggregate title and set a mark in the clout shoot.

Record-a-Day Janice's Play

(Times News Services)

VANCOUVER — Janice Stenhouse's speed proved to be a record-a-day as the North Vancouver sparkler bettered her third Canadian record in three days of competition at the British Columbia open and age-group swimming championships which ended Monday.

Miss Stenhouse left the rest of the field well behind in her heat of the 220-yard girls' 10-and-under individual medley, racing home in the record time of 3:02.9. The old record was 3:07.4.

The North Vancouver swimmer won the final of the event also but in the slightly slower time of 3:08.9.

OTHER RECORDS

Miss Stenhouse set a new Canadian mark in the 110-yard freestyle Saturday with a time of 1:03.4 and was in record-breaking form again Sunday, establishing a new mark in the 55-yard freestyle with a 34.3 clocking.

In all, she finished with six victories and was awarded the outstanding swimmer trophy.

Robert Glass of Calgary set two Canadian age-group records in the 10-and-under events, winning the 110-yard butterfly in 1:23.8 and 220-yard individual medley in 2:56.5.

Donna Marie Gurr of Vancouver Canadian Dolphins set the other record Monday, establishing a 13-14 national mark with a 2:39.9 clocking in the 220-yard individual medley.

Dolphins won the team championship with 528 points, more than doubled the total of runner-up Vancouver Amateur Swim Club. Touring Swedish Police Club was third.

Victoria Olympians finished ninth.

Tim Cairney of Olympians was the outstanding Victoria swimmer Monday, gaining a first in the 110-yard butterfly event for 13 and 14-year-olds with a 1:06.5 clocking. He also gained a second in the 220-yard individual medley in 2:34.9.

Greg Stone of Olympians was second in the open 220-yard breaststroke in 2:21.6 while Jan Crook of Cohoes earned a second in the 11-12 group's 110-yard butterfly event.

Judy Thomson of Olympians was third in the 220-yard individual medley for the 11-12 bracket and fifth in the 110-yard butterfly.

Teammate Gail Williams was fifth in the 13-14 butterfly event while Cohoes' Chris Price finished sixth in the 220-yard individual medley for 11-12 swimmers.

On Sunday, Dale Long of Cohoes won the 110-yard backstroke for 11-12 swimmers. Teammate Doug Portelance was third.

SERVED AT MACAULAY POINT, COLWOOD

Veteran Pro, Fred Burns Dies

FRED BURNS
. . . dead at 70

Freddy Burns, former professional at Macaulay Point and Royal Colwood golf clubs, and a well-known figure in Victoria's golfing scene for several years, passed away Saturday evening.

Fred was 70 years of age and, although he had suffered a heart attack some time ago, seemed in great form Saturday when he played a few holes at Gorge Vale.

He told club captain Ab Robertson that he was considering buying a new type of driver to give him "greater length."

"I was deeply shocked when I heard of his death a few hours later," Robertson said.

Burns succeeded Walter Gravlin as pro at Macaulay Point in 1923, and held the post until the beginning of the war in 1939, when Macaulay was taken over by the military and closed as a golf course.

After serving in the army in the Second World War, Burns returned and joined Royal Colwood as professional in 1946, where he carried on until 1953.

He then had a short stint as a pro in Alberni before coming back to Victoria to join the department of national defence.

"He had a keen analytical mind as a golf teacher," said Gorge Vale secretary Leo Derman, "and many of the best golfers in the district learned a great deal from him." One of his keenest disciples and favorites was Laurie Kerr, seven-time city champion.

Burns served on the board of directors of Gorge Vale after becoming a member.

He leaves his widow, Dorothy; two sons, Terence and Brian, serving in the armed forces at Edmonton and West Germany, respectively; a daughter, Mrs. W. (Lois) Fraser of Victoria; a brother, Robert E. Burns of Vancouver; two sisters, Mrs. E. Richardson and Mrs. W. Provost, both of Victoria, and eight grandchildren.

Services will take place in Sands Mortuary at 3 p.m. on Thursday with Rev. H. B. Ilesey officiating. Interment will be in Hatley Memorial Gardens.

Braves' Obligations Ended After Trade

By The Canad[illegible]

Pitcher Clay Carroll asked A[illegible] Braves to trade him last year and the National L[illegible]ue baseball club obliged by sending him to Cincinnati.

The Reds converted Carroll into a reliever this season and he has beaten everyone—except the Braves.

Atlanta pounced on Carroll Tuesday for the third time this season in a 5-4 extra-inning win over the Reds. Carroll was the victim of Sonny Jackson's game-winning, bases-loaded single. His record now is 11-4.

Los Angeles Dodgers stopped Houston Astros 4-1 on Manny Mota's three-run, inside-the-park homer to protect their half-game Western Division lead over Atlanta.

EXPOS CONNECT

In other NL action Tuesday, Montreal Expos trounced Chicago Cubs, the Eastern Division leaders, 11-4, St. Louis Cardinals swept a doubleheader from New York Mets 4-1 and 8-5, Philadelphia Phillies posted their eighth consecutive win, 7-4 over Pittsburgh Pirates and San Francisco Giants nipped San Diego Padres 5-4.

Carroll came on in the ninth inning to cut off Atlanta's rally after the Braves had tied the game 4-4 on Tito Francona's run-scoring single.

But in the 10th, the Braves loaded the bases with none out on a walk to Orlando Cepeda, Clete Boyer's single and an intentional pass to Tony Gonzalez before Jackson's winning blow.

RALLY IN EIGHTH

Cincinnati starter Jim Merritt blanked the Braves on four hits until they rallied with three runs in the eighth inning, including two on Hank Aaron's double.

Tony Perez slammed a three-run homer for the Reds in the first inning, his fourth in four games.

Mota's seventh-inning homer snapped a tight pitching duel between the Dodgers' Bill Singer, who picked up his tenth victory, and Houston's Denny Lemaster.

The Expos' battered Chicago star pitcher Ken Holtzman for five runs in the third inning, then chased him during another five-run rally in the fourth.

Despite the loss, the Cubs boosted their Eastern Division lead to 7½ games over the Mets. The Cubs had won three straight from St. Louis before going to Montreal.

SLUGGERS ON BEAM

A pair of American League hitters, Boog Powell and Frank Howard both had their bats booming Tuesday, but only Howard came out a winner.

Powell drove across seven Baltimore runs with two homers, and a pair of singles, but the Orioles, Eastern Division leaders, were beaten 10-9 by New York Yankees.

Howard's efforts helped Washington Senators sweep a doubleheader from Cleveland Indians, 4-1 and 7-5. The tall first baseman clubbed a home run, along with two other hits, in each game. His ninth-inning single in the second game drove across the deciding run.

Elsewhere in the AL Tuesday, Seattle Pilots trimmed Oakland Athletics 7-1 as Reggie Jackson cracked his 30th home run of the season for the Athletics' only score. Minnesota Twins outscored Chicago White Sox 10-5, Detroit Tigers trounced Boston Red Sox 12-4, and California Angels trounced Kansas City Royals 9-3.

BOOSTS HIS AVERAGE

Howard raised his batting average to .306 and his homer total to 26.

The six-foot, seven inch, 260-pound slugger singled in the first inning of the first game, homered in the third and singled in the eighth. In the second game, he walked in the first, homered in the fifth, doubled in the seventh and singled in the three-run ninth inning.

Powell's runs batted in total soared to 70, his homer total to 19 and his average to .303. The six-foot, four inch 240-pounder cracked a two-run homer in the first, a two-run single in the fifth and a three-run homer in the seventh to send the Orioles ahead 9-7.

But Frank Fernandez clouted a three-run Yankee homer in the last of the seventh, leaving Powell a ninth-inning chance to tie the game with another homer. But all he did was single, and the Orioles couldn't score.

QUALIFYING for Buick Open golf tournament which gets under way in Flint, Mich., Thursday was Victoria's Bill Wakeham (above). He made it with one-over-par 73.

Babe Ruth Playdowns Go Friday

Friday could prove to be the start of a shorter trip to the top for one of the Babe Ruth Baseball League teams on southern Vancouver Island.

That's when playoffs commence for the lower Island's 13-year-old Babe Ruth title. The final is slated for July 7, or 8th, if necessary.

Fifteen-year-olds open their playoffs on July 11 and continue until 14, with a game on the 15, if necessary.

This year the lower Island champions go directly into the B.C. finals starting for 13-year-olds in North Vancouver on July 14 and for 15-year-olds in Kelowna on July 20.

WORLD SERIES

The B.C. winner goes into the "World" championships on Aug. 5 in Casper, Wyoming.

Victoria Babe Ruth League hosts the 13-year-old tournament at Bullen Park, facing Cosmopolitan No. 1 in the opening Friday game at 6 p.m. Saturday's action begins with a game at 1 p.m. between Evening Optimist and Cosmopolitan No. 2 and continues with another game at 6 p.m. Sunday times in the double-loss elimination tourney are the same with weeknight games at 6 p.m.

Reynolds Road Park will be the site and Evening Optimist Babe Ruth League the host for the 15-year-old tourney. Times are the same as above with Cosmopolitan No. 1 taking on Cosmopolitan No. 2 in the opening game Friday (July 11) and Evening Optimists facing Victoria in the opening Saturday game.

English Side 37 Runs Shy Of Test Win

LONDON (AP) — England and the West Indies drew in the second cricket test match completed Tuesday.

At the close of play England had scored 295 for seven wickets, only 37 runs short of the 332 it needed to win.

England won the first test.

West Indies captain Gary Sobers declared his second innings at 295 for nine Sunday morning, leaving England needing 332 runs to win.

After a slow start, Geoff Boycott and Phil Sharpe came within 104 runs of the target with seven wickets standing and an hour left to play.

England's bid collapsed when both were retired, Boycott for 106 and Sharpe for 86. Jackie Hampshire and Alan Knott also were dismissed. England had scored 295 for seven wickets when time ran out.

Resuming at 247 for six Monday, Sobers completed his first 50 of the tour but lost three partners before he declared.

The move paid off early as England lost opening batsman John Edrich with only one run on the board and Peter Parfitt and Basil D'Oliveira were out early in the afternoon with the score still short of 100.

Then Sharpe and Boycott came together and scored 145 runs in 125 minutes before the West Indian bowlers broke through.

Tuesday's other scores:

At Nottingham—Nottinghamshire 333; Derbyshire 164, draw.

At Leicester — Worcestershire beat Leicestershire by 6 wickets. Leicestershire 295 for 9 declared and 148; Worcestershire 13 and 131 for 4.

Gypsy Korean Likes Victoria

By PAT DUFOUR

It takes time, education and a great deal of determination to be a modern-day gypsy.

Sam Kim had wanted to travel "to and fro like a gypsy" for eight years. He finally made it March 25 when he left Seoul en route to Canada.

Although he wants the wandering life, the 29-year-old Korean is somewhat choosy about the terrain in which he wanders.

He favors Canada over the United States "because America is so full of trouble — with black and white against each other."

He also favors Victoria over Vancouver. After spending two months in the mainland city, he confesses that Victoria has everything that he's been looking for.

His wife, Chung Sook Kye and their two-year-old daughter, Yong Ran, arrived from Korea last week.

Kim says that his decision to come to Canada was greatly influenced by the many Canadian missionaries he met through his father, who is a Presbyterian minister in Seoul.

The oldest of five children, Kim says he made the break from the rest of his family "because if I waited any longer it would be too late."

Training for his particular brand of gypsyhood began in 1961 when he graduated in pharmacy from Seoul National University.

For four years he ran his own store, speaking as much English as he could "because in an undeveloped country like Korea it is popular to speak the language of more fortunate countries."

He worked for an American pharmaceutical firm in Seoul to get a nodding acquaintance with North American terminology. He also worked for a Scandinavian-run medical centre to round out his knowledge.

Once the immigration wheels were set in motion, Kim spent every Wednesday night at the YMCA in Seoul for three months, studying motion pictures of Canada.

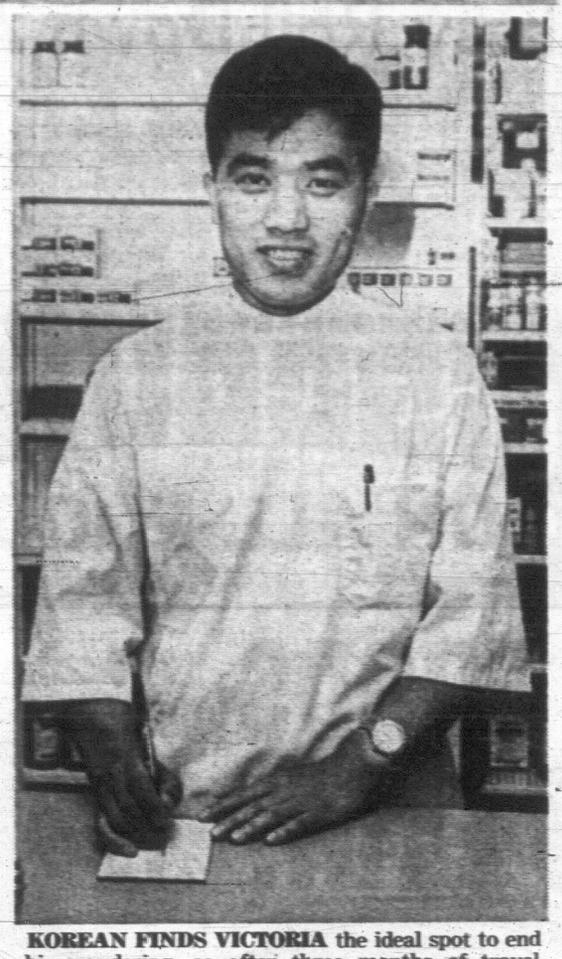
Gypsy Kim is now quite content to pitch his caravan permanently in Victoria. But it's not that easy.

Currently he's working as an assistant pharmacist because he has to pass examinations to fully qualify as a pharmacist.

"There is quite a difference between Korean and English terminology and it will take me about a year before I'm ready to write the exam."

He's working at this project now. He's also working toward that important day when he receives Canadian citizenship.

Kim is also ready to settle down and do his wandering Canadian-style — on vacations.



KOREAN FINDS VICTORIA the ideal spot to end his wandering, so after three months of travel Sam Kim, a graduate in pharmacy from the National University, in Seoul, is set to settle down here with his wife and daughter.

Teen Dance For Lacrosse Saturday

The Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association will hold a teen dance Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight at the George Pearkes Arena.

The dance will feature Frank Alexander and the Electric Circus, and is being sponsored by divisions one and two junior lacrosse teams.

Money raised will be used for the teams' travelling expenses.

COLLEGE SECURITY MEET SET HERE

Security directors from 250 universities and colleges all over North America and Puerto Rico will hold their annual conference at the University of Victoria next year.

Hosts for the five-day conference of the International Association of College and University Security Directors will be Uvic traffic and security supervisor Tom O'Connor and his wife Tess.

Security forces on some large American campuses are now armed and equipped on the same scale as regular police forces.

Apartment Freeze Ends

Applications to erect apartment buildings in Saanich should soon be running through municipal machinery again.

The lands and planning committee will recommend to council that 16 applications, held up during a two-month freeze, be processed.

The committee has also worked over the duplex situation, and will present to council a municipal planner's recommendation to control construction. They would be forbidden in farm areas, and restricted in places where lot size is 8,400 square feet.

Should council accept the recommendations, it will hold public hearings before amending the zoning bylaw.

Council will deal with the apartment and duplex situations at its Monday meeting.

Reporting to the committee Monday night, assistant planner G. V. Laurenson said there are 42 lots of the 10,000 square foot minimum, required in restricted areas, available for duplexes.

He also told the committee there is "no appreciable or significant difference in improvements and sales values in houses in the same block or even next door to duplexes."

BEYOND JURISDICTION

Planners had made an "extensive survey." One of the reasons for the duplex dilemma was complaints from neighbors that their property values were being forced down.

The committee had hoped they would be able to recommend density and appearance restrictions on duplexes, but found it was beyond the jurisdiction of the municipality.

Laurenson said duplexes represented 25 per cent of building starts in Saanich last year, and should not be discouraged. He said he is sure they will continue to be built in the unrestricted areas.

NOT LAST WORD

The committee was told new subdivisions, when planned, would probably allow lots large enough for duplexes.

The ban on duplexes in farming areas would keep construction in the sewered part of the municipality, Laurenson said. But as those areas were sewered, zoning would change.

Said Mayor Hugh Curtis: "I view these regulations as not the last word on duplexes in Saanich. If it will cover this short term situation, I'll be quite happy."

Apartment applications had been stopped while planners studied apartment needs of the municipality. Although their 80-page report was not complete, an interim report was given to the committee Monday, which suggested current applications could be dealt with.

The interim report said the range of housing has been expanding, but "the role that apartments can should fill in the community is far from being fulfilled."

Statistics show, the report said, there is enough land for apartments for "many years." However, "much of this land is not suited for lower density types of apartment development, whereas a high percentage of the need, especially in suburbzn areas, is for the apartment community catering to families."

The report suggests apartment building should be encouraged on vacant land to stop demolition of usable dwellings and where lot sizes keep land acquisition costs low.

Being a TV and photographic model has its advantages, it has been said but when you have to watch your weight it's no fun. When I first started my program at the Spa 60 days ago, I was amazed at the weight I had put on. Thanks to the special personalized program of exercise and food consultation at the Spa I have been able to strengthen the weak muscles in my lower back which has helped my work as a model to be much easier to endure. Canada Shows Age Modestly

By The Canadian Press

Canada, with modest gaiety, became 102 years old Tuesday.

For most Canadians it was just another summer holiday marked with speech making, sports and concert events and the inevitable rush to the highways and resort areas.

There was an international flavor, too, when Dominion Day was noted in Germany, Hong Kong and Bucharest.

The Canadian activities started Monday night on Parliament Hill with concerts, a fireworks display and dancing in the streets until 1 a.m.

Prime Minister Trudeau, in a message to mark the day, said the tolerance Canadians show towards each other is the greatest natural resource of the country.

In Toronto, someone aimed poorly and a 21-gun salute tore leaves off maple trees and rattled the windows of the Ontario legislature.

About 250 persons watched the firing and then joined about 1,500 others listening to a speech from Thomas Wells, minister without portfolio in the provincial government.

HOSTS AT FLY-IN

In Port Chambley, Germany, members of Canada's NATO brigade were hosts at an international fly-in when 90 aircraft arrived with more than 350 guests from other NATO brigades for a friendly get-together.

About 50 persons gathered at the Sai Wan war cemetery in Hong kong as R. G. Hathaway, Canadian trade commissioner, placed a wreath in memory of the 300 Canadians who died there in defence of Hong Kong. The men were members of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles of Canada.

In Bucharest, an article in the official Communist party newspaper Scinetia commended Canada's decision to establish diplomatic ties with Communist China. The article was published to mark Canada's birthday.

Across Canada, the weather was generally favorable.

In Nova Scotia, Lt.-Gov. Victor Oland officially opened the Gathering of the Clans and Fishermen's Regatta at Pugwash. Westville celebrated its 75th anniversary and the Acadia Summer Playhouse opened in Wolfville.

In Newfoundland, the Caribou made its last westbound railway run from St. John's to Port aux Basques. The last eastbound train left Port aux Basques today.

Newcastle was the centre of attention in New Brunswick, starting with its traditional outdoor pancake breakfasts. The celebrations also included the Miss Miramachi contest, won by Linda Sharp of Newcastle.

Montreal Expos celebrated by trouncing Chicago Cubs 11-4 before 19,858 fans which brought the season's attendance at Montreal home games to 514,796. A ceremony was held at home plate in honor of the 500,000th fan.

Montreal also featured ethnic singing and dancing groups at Place des Nations at Man and His World.

British Columbia held its annual lamb barbecue on Saturna Island. There were festivals at White Rock and Vancouver's Stanley Park, the Western Canada soap-box derby and loggers' sports day at Mission City, a salmon queen festival at Steveston on Lulu Island and a 10-mile walk through the Victoria suburb of Oak Bay.

In Winnipeg, a folk festival was sponsored by the Folk Arts Council of Manitoba as well as athletics and band and choir concerts.

There was another folk art festival in Edmonton where a cast of 500 representing 20 countries took part. Red Deer, Alta., also had a folk festival.

In Ontario, two skydivers parachuted on to the baseball diamond at Kingston penitentiary. A third missed the mark and landed in Lake Ontario, but waded ashore.

Bill Wacey of Trenton, Ont., and Bill Baird of Kingston hit the mark as part of the July 1 celebrations inside the prison. Lawrence Crocker of Toronto missed.

Before the Magistrate

Frank Tamok, no address available, was sentenced in central court Monday to three months in prison for assault causing bodily harm.

He was convicted at his trial last week of stabbing and beating his wife Elizabeth in Central Park June 7.

The testimony of Tamok's 13-year-old stepson was accepted above the denials of both his mother and Tamok that he had done anything but shove his wife.

"In view of your wife's attitude and what your counsel has said, I'm giving you what I consider to be a very lenient sentence," Magistrate William Ostler told Tamok.

Brian N. Offer, no address available, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the Lone Star Texaco Station late Sunday night with intent to steal.

He was remanded to July 2 for a pre-sentence report.

A policeman told the court he arrived at the gas station at 2121 Douglas to find Offer had been caught prowling the store by the manager.

He told police he had broken a window to enter, and had broken open the cash register with a shovel, and tried to open a soft drink machine with a crowbar.

Offer said he was looking for money, which he needed because he had just been thrown out of his house.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the youth had a recent conviction for a similar offence.

Mark S. Danes, 20, of 805 Penwell, charged with trafficking in LSD, elected to be tried by a judge without jury, at his preliminary hearing before Magistrate William Ostler Monday morning.

Elaine D. Stentaford, 1002 Balmoral, was fined $300 for impaired driving, and $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Charles E. Lambert, 1158 Lockley, was sentenced to 10 days in prison for impaired driving.

UNDERGROUND TESTING BAN URGED BY GROUP

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of more than 100 Americans, including a former commandant of the United States Marine Corps, has asked President Nixon to initiate negotiations to ban large underground nuclear explosions.

The group, the Educational Committee to Halt Atomic Weapons Spread, appealed to the president in a letter to the White House made public Tuesday.

Easy Roll Down Aisle

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Most brides walk down the aisle. Mrs. Robert Rockey rolled down it.

"We met on roller skates," said the new bride. "Skating is our favorite sport, so we decided to be married on skates."

That's how the former Edith Frable explained her wedding Monday evening in the middle of the Hecla Park skating rink.

The bride skated to the middle of the rink on her brother's arm.

Awaiting her was her husband-to-be, the best man and maid of honor, all balanced nervously.

When the vows had been said and the rings exchanged, the couple skated to the rear of the rink where they headed a receiving line.

S. Africa Plans Security Police

CAPE TOWN (AP) — The South African government proposed controversial new legislation Monday that would establish a secret police organization called BOSS — the Bureau of State Security — answerable neither to parliament nor the courts.

U.S. 'Contain China' Policies Being Adopted by Moscow Chiefs

By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Over the past two decades, a cornerstone of American foreign policy and practice has been the "containment" of China. Now, amid signs that the United States is beginning to reconsider this policy, the Soviet Union is vigorously pushing a "containment" concept that strangely resembles the old U.S. approach to the Far East.

This development may tempt U.S. strategists to regard the possibility of Soviet-American co-operation in Asia as the way to assure peace and security in the region. Such a move would be hazardous, however.

Growing as it does out of the worsening dispute between Moscow and Peking, the present Soviet thrust into Asia is mainly aimed at curbing Chinese influence in the area. For the United States to be associated with that Soviet effort, therefore, would hobble steps that Washington may want to take in the future to break its deadlocked relations with China.

This does not mean, of course, that the United States would profit by shunning Moscow's assistance in attempting to resolve specific problems. Even though their leverage in Hanoi is limited, the Russians have been helpful in the past in communicating American proposals to the North Vietnamese, and they can serve again as a valuable channel.

Would Bulwark Isolation Policy

But the notion of a regional Asian arrangement built on a combination of U.S. and Soviet power ignores the fundamental reality that legitimate Chinese interests in the Far East must be recognized if that turbulent part of the world is ever to achieve a measure of stability.

Moreover, an arrangement of that kind would indirectly bulwark the hard-line leadership faction in Peking that seeks to perpetuate China's isolation, rather than encourage the Chinese pragmatists who are apparently striving to guide their country away from its traditional "middle kingdom" complex.

The Russians plainly prefer to see the Peking extremists gain the upper hand, since this lends substance to their claims that the Chinese are hopelessly intransigent. For that reason, official Moscow statements increasingly appear to be scripted by the ghost of John Foster Dulles, while Soviet military gestures look like they might have been blueprinted by residual cold warriors in the Pentagon.

Within recent weeks, for example, Soviet radio broadcasts beamed to the Far East have stressed the threat of Red Chinese subversion in Southeast Asia. And in contrast to 20 years ago, when they called for revolution, the Russians are currently posing as the defenders of the status quo.

A Moscow broadcast last month, to cite a fairly typical case, blamed the Chinese for creating "unrest" in Burma, Laos, Cambodia and Thailand, quoting the Thai foreign minister as evidence of Peking's designs against Southeast Asia.

Oddly enough, the same broadcast attacked Peking for encouraging the prolongation of the Vietnam war. It said: "According to the Geneva agreements, China should have helped to normalize the situation in Indochina. However, the Maoist clique's activities have been the exact opposite."

On June 13, the Soviet foreign affairs weekly Novoye Vremya accused Peking of using the Chinese minorities in Burma, Cambodia and Malaysia to foment trouble, adding that Mao Tse-tung and his partisans have "hegemonistic pretensions" in South and Southeast Asia.

The most intriguing Russian remark to date was the statement of Soviet Communist boss Leonid Brezhnev, made at the World Communist Conference in Moscow a couple of weks ago, that the Soviet Union is preparing to recommend the formation of an Asian "system of collective security."

Soviets Boost Asia Presence

While Brezhnev did not clarify his statement further, Soviet sources pointed to an earlier article in Izvestia by Vikenty Matveyev, the newspaper's chief political commentator, which emphasized the potential Chinese threat to Southeast Asia as the British pull out their forces east of Suez and if the United States withdraws its troops from Vietnam.

To fill the vacuum created by these withdrawals, Matveyev wrote, the Soviet Union and other Communist states "will contribute, as they have always done, to every effort that helps to ensure firmer dependable peace and security in Asia" as part of a broad "collective security" arrangement.

Matching this verbiage, meanwhile, the Russians have been engaged in a number of actual moves to strengthen their presence in the Far East. These moves have ranged from sending the Bolshoi Ballet to the Philippines to deploying elements of the Soviet fleet in the Indian Ocean.

Following the visit of Soviet trouble-shooter Victor Louis to Taiwan in October, the Russians have also accelerated their contacts with Chiang Kai-shek's regime. After attending an international tourism meeting in Bulgaria last month, for instance, a group of Chinese Nationalist officials took an unprecedented trip to the Soviet Union.

Whether or not this Soviet offensive in Asia really makes any headway essentially depends on the Asians themselves. Many, among the Indians and Japanese, are loathe to get involved in military pacts, either Russian or American. On the other hand, smaller countries like Thailand and Cambodia may feel that a Soviet presence in the region increases their manoeuverability.

Put whatever evolves as the Sovier drive gains momentum, one forecast seems plausible: the Balkanized area of Southeast Asia is likely to remain a cockpit of power rivalries that will inhibit its stable economic, social and political development for a long time to come.

Visit to Moscow By Nixon Proposed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield suggested Monday that President Nixon visit Moscow on his coming round-the-world trip but the White House insisted that there is "no plan at all for any additional stops."

However, the White House announced that the visit to Washington of West German Chancellor Kurt-Georg Kiesinger, first scheduled for June 23-24 and then postponed until Aug. 4-5, now has been rescheduled to Aug. 7-8. This would permit a presidential stop elsewhere after Mr. Nixon visits Rumania on Aug. 2-3.

But White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the president still intends to return home "about" Aug. 3.

The announcement on Saturday of the Nixon visit to independent Communist Rumania both set off speculation as to the purpose and overshadowed the other part of the trip which will take him to the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, India and Pakistan.

Mansfield's point in suggesting a Nixon visit to Moscow was that the president could go there to talk with "the people with whom we are going to have negotiations, hopefully."

He was referring to the long-delayed Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) talks. As of Monday, the United States had received no reply, officials said, to its proposal to set July 31 as a target date to get started.

AN ARMADA OF PLEASURE BOATS gathered at Saturna Island Tuesday for the 20th annual Dominion Day lamb barbecue. A couple takes time out to watch the fleet after dining on lamb, cooked over pits of glowing Douglas fir limbs. Boats travelled from other Gulf Islands, the Mainland and Victoria for the event. The Oak Bay Marina's 51-foot charter vessel Lakewood made two fully-loaded trips. The afternoon featured races for all ages and novel competitions, including one which has become a favorite —clothing pigs in diapers. Jim Campbell, an island farmer and sheep ranger who acts as chief chef and one of the organizers, said that all the pigs came through the ordeal without any pin-sticking. (Bill Halkett photos.)

MORE THAN 800 HELPINGS of lamb were served at barbecue, with 24 of the island's prime lambs on the menu. Volunteer chef Al Principe of Vancouver helps Marianna Pulchny of Vancouver with her choice of cut.

BOOM YEAR INDICATED

Tourists Pour Into B.C.

More people from the United States than ever before are visiting British Columbia this year.

Travel Industry Minister Kenneth Kiernan announced Monday that 40,877 non-Canadian registered cars entered British Columbia in May.

There was an average of 3.3 persons per car, he said.

In 1968 there were 30,049 non-Canadian cars.

"Judging by the increase it looks as though we're in for a really big year," said Mr. Kiernan.

He said British Columbia had the highest increase in tourist travel of any province.

"Our increase amounted to 36 per cent as compared to 28.3 per cent for Quebec and 27.4 for Nova Scotia," he said.

ALL ABOARD RESCUED AS CABIN BOAT SINKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 31-foot cabin cruiser Excalibur sank after hitting a submerged object six miles off Vancouver Tuesday.

Nine of the 10 persons were rescued by a passing boat while skipper Mike Jensen escaped in a rubber dinghy after radioing for help.

They were returning from the Saturna Island lamb barbecue when the mishap occurred.

Recreation Centre Planned for Tahsis

TAHSIS — A modern recreation centre including a 200-seat theatre, cafeteria and dancing area is planned for Tahsis.

Businessman Tony Grande said the centre will also have a large room with pool tables. It will be located between the present laundry and sports field.

"We plan to open in October," he said, "and we are negotiating to bring some of the big film spectaculars to Tahsis.

"This has been impossible in the past because of the small theatre screen and poor sound facilities."

BASEBALL PARK

Other projects for Tahsis include a combination baseball park and soccer field, near a new cedar sawmill now under construction by Nootka Cedar Products Ltd.

Sites for mobile homes and other developments are being prepared and highways department officials are studying a possible road link between Tahsis and the Island road system.

Comox Socreds Nominate Campbell

COURTENAY — A meeting of the Social Credit organization for the Comox riding Saturday night re-nominated Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs, to run again in the next provincial election.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1969 —PAGE 23

Mission Worker Given Medal

By JUDI FREEMAN

Eva Hasell can map out almost every back road in western and northern Canada.

She can also pinpoint which Anglican children study their Bible lessons and how many newborns need to be baptized.

Miss Hasell, 81, is the founder and honorary organizer of the Sunday School Caravan Mission, an Anglican service which takes religion into the hinterlands of Canada.

Friday Miss Hasell was awarded the Order of Canada Medal of Service for her 49 years as principal worker for the Caravan Mission.

In Victoria on a lecture tour before she begins her summer Yukon work, Miss Hasell said she was "very honored" to receive the federal government medal. Recipients are chosen on the basis of merit, especially service to Canada or humanity at large, and are drawn from nominations submitted by individuals and organizations.

Miss Hasell began her first caravan tour from Regina in 1920 at the invitation of the bishop and parishioners.

"I used to hear a great deal about the immigrants from my county in England (Cumberland) coming out to Canada," she recalled. "They missed having religious training for their children."

At the time, Miss Hasell was a graduate of the Church of England's St. Christopher's College and was training Sunday school teachers in northern England.

She decided to come to Canada and establish a Sunday school service.

Arriving in Winnipeg early in 1920, she bought a Tin Lizzie, had it fitted for sleeping accommodation and took a mechanic's course before heading out to what was then undeveloped Saskatchewan areas.

From that first mission tour has grown the Caravan Mission, a fleet of 26 vans which covers the rural areas of Nova Scotia, northern Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia and the Yukon.

Miss Hasell and her secretary, Iris Sayle who joined her in 1926, spent the 1930s in the Peace River district, soliciting food and clothing from England and eastern Canada for their charges as well as providing for their spiritual needs.

"We've had many adventures in many areas," commented Miss Sayle.

At one point Miss Hasell established an outpost hospital in Fort St. John when she was travelling up and down the Alaska Highway.

Winters are spent lecturing and touring in England.

This summer Miss Hasell and Miss Sayle will continue their caravan work in northern Alberta and the Yukon.

Guests Come in Crinolines

From his frame on the wall, Charles Dickens looked down benevolently on a company of men and women dressed as some of the characters in his novels.

In their crinolines and bonnets, cravats and chimney pot collars, they danced and sang and competed in a quiz on Dickens' novels.

Occasion was the annual midsummer party of the Victoria branch, Dickens Fellowship, held at the home of Miss Olive Watherston, 637 Linden Avenue.

Denis Edmond gave eloquent readings from Pickwick Papers, and announced that the Victoria and Vancouver branches of the Fellowship are organizing a charter flight to Britain next summer to participate in Dickensian festivities.

A sing-song was led by Miss Alexandria James, branch treasurer.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Maunsell, Mrs. Carol Gildermeister, past president, was in charge of catering assisted by Mrs. R. Marion Lloyd, vice-president.

Model Tries for Cheekbones But Settles for Skull Look

NEW YORK (AP) — Naomi Sims, the 21-year-old Negro model who made famous the skull look, reached the top when she was losing her hair.

"The doctor said some people develop ulcers, perhaps your hair doesn't grow," said Miss Sims, who found she was eating less and worrying more as she launched a modelling career.

"I was starving myself. I wanted high cheek bones. But I simply can't get them."

She gave up on high cheek bones and slicked her hair down close to her head, attached hairpieces and thus created her now famous skull look. She started eating again and gained 20 pounds which went unnoticed on her five-foot 10-inch frame. She now weighs 135 pounds and her hair is growing back.

The daughter of a Pittsburgh maintenance worker she said she never had doubts she could succeed in the fashion world.

"It was the most natural thing," she said. "People have told me I was pretty since I was a little girl. When I was 14, I said I wanted to do a cover of Vogue. I had a fascination with cosmetics. I wasn't allowed to wear them but I'd try them on at home."

In June, 1967, she came to New York to study design on a scholarship at the Fashion Institute of Technology. She inquired about the possibility of earning extra money and was introduced to a friend of a friend of a photographer. On her first assignment, she made the cover of The New York Times magazine.

After that she was flooded with requests. She signed with an agency and dropped out of school. Almost immediately she commanded $60-an-hour fees.

The first week she worked every day. Then for 10 weeks she didn't work at all.

"I was so worried but then I did a television commercial," she said. "Now I don't worry. I know always there is something around the corner."

Miss Sims said she has experienced prejudice few times in her life. "There is a point where beauty surpasses prejudice," she said.

Year-Around Styles Prevail

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Have you noticed how much of one's wardrobe can now be worn all year? While designers continue to present seasonal collections, they do so more for the purpose of presenting new ideas or fresh merchandise than to signal some big seasonal turnover.

Recently, I tried a little fashion test on several women. I showed them some pictures of new styles and asked them to tell whether they were for summer or fall. The consensus was that the clothes were either for fall, or could be for either season. As it happened, they were all from spring-summer collections.

Even where clothes are made in light fabrics, women are likely to be wearing them well into fall. All those little knits and jerseys of man-made fabrics seem to go on endlessly useful and fashion-right.

Take one of Jonny Herbert's current styles in Enkalure nylon jersey. The print is in the newest Art Deco trend, in pinks and brown, the styling is a wrap-over surplice with a sash, and the dress is sleeved. It can be worn right now and as far into fall as you like, especially with those ropes of pearls everyone is reviving.

If this dress is for day occasions, the casual cotton knit is just as wearable for summer vacations, fall weekends, or as a top over pants. The simplest look like extended T-shirts, in navy, cranberry or chocolate brown striped with white. Wear straight or spiked with a chain belt, as the sportswear house of Red Eye likes theirs. Incidentallly, the short sleeves, which would once have relegated such a dress to summer only, are a new fashion point for this fall, another reason for the non-seasonal fashion life of the T-shirt dress.

The jumper has been a leading style ever since last fall. Summer ones come in color combinations like brown and white which are continuing right into fall. They are often two-piece, with a vest-cut top, long and lean, and a striped shirt with neckline interest in the form of a bow or a cuff collar. The blouse may be made of voile, but like many other light fabrics, voile is also being used for fall.

Bobbie Brooks, for instance, does summer outfits with plaid voile shirts which can certainly go on to fall. Likewise their dotted Swiss dress in red or brown with a big white collar, tucked ric-rac bodice and deeply cuffed sleeves. Colors, you see, even for summer, are the kind that used to be thought of as only for fall.

Summer fashions prophesy fall if only because one does what one pleases these days. The woman who happens to dislike heavy fabrics for her indoor clothes no longer has to wear them just because that's the way clothes are made for fall and winter.

One of the prettier fashion trends is the costume look, meaning not the ensemble but fashions adapted from other countries and other times. Oriental, gypsy, 18th century, Edwardian, Twenties, Thirties—all of these started last autumn, have contined through spring and summer, and will be seen in various guises for fall. So a hooded Arabian dress from Pandemonium, meant to wear now, will be just as right for fall parties. In white, the front and hood are banded in multi-color embroidery. The sleeves are like angel wings, and the waist is elasticized to give a blouson effect to the bodice and a dirndl effect to the skirt.

Multi-faceted fashions for today's woman are the trend. Above, the wrap dress, made of nylon jersey, may be worn on cool summer days during the summer and long into the fall. Sashed and long-sleeved in the 1940's manner, it is in an Art Deco print of pinks and browns. The surplice neck goes naturally with pearl ropes. At left, the Arabian-inspired dress adorns a patio during the day and attends cocktail parties by night. In a white knit polyester, the hood and zippered front are banded in embroidery of multi-color flowers. Elasticized waist blouses the top, creating a dirndle skirt. Angel wing sleeves add drama.

TODAY'S RECIPE

CHINESE VEGETABLE FRIED RICE

Four tsps. corn oil (for cooking), 1 cup diced celery, 1 cup minced onion, ½ cup green peppers cut in strips, ½ tsp. accent, salt, pepper to taste, ½ tsp. sugar, 4 cups prepared pre-cooked rice, 3 tsps. soya sauce.

Heat corn oil in a large frying pan. Add celery, onions, green pepper, accent, salt, pepper and sugar.

Saute over high heat for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Add rice, stirring constantly and cook for another 2 minutes. Add soya sauce and cook 2 minutes longer, still stirring.

Note: Rice is much better if it is cooked the day before and left overnight in the refrigerator.

VIRGINIA STYLE HAM LOAF

Three-quarters lb. smoked shoulder of ham, ¾ lb. lean fresh shoulder of ham (have the butcher grind these together), 1 cup bread crumbs soaked in 1 scant cup of milk with 1 beaten egg.

Mix and form into a loaf.

Make a syrup as follows: ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup water, 1 cup brown sugar, dash of cloves, ½ tsp. mustard.

Boil ingredients together and pour over ham loaf. Bake at 300 deg. for 1-1½ hours, basting with syrup every ½-hour until done.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a supply.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Washable Vinyl Replaces Cloth

By PENNY SAVER

At first I didn't recognize the girl behind the cheery smile and friendly hello. Then I remembered—of course, this is Mathilda's new neighbor-Wendy.

"Greetings. Are you buying what-nots for the house?"

"What-nots is the word for it. I have been vainly searching for a left-handed can-opener. Mark, I mean Art, has decided to stop bowing to the will of the right-handed world."

"Art?" "Yes, Mark had decided he doesn't want to be Mark anymore so he is adopting his second name. Arthur, or Art. I keep forgetting." She gave a melodramatic sigh. "In any case, I wanted to ask if you have every seen a left-handed can opener, an old-fashioned mechanical one, of course."

Sad to say, I haven't so I am putting Wendy's question to my readers. If you have ever seen a left-handed can opener, do give me a call and tell me where it can be found. I realized as I right-handedly man-handled the lid off a can last night just how difficult these gadgets could be for a southpaw.

Wendy is as busy inside her house as Mark, I mean Art, is in the garden. One thing she is busy with is the furnishings, and she has found a dandy way to eliminate unhandy things like table cloths.

"I found this nice heavy vinyl," she said, pulling it out to show me. The vinyl is very heavy and made to resemble a coarsely woven fabric. The back is adhesive so all one has to do is cut it to fit, carefully remove the backing and even more carefully apply it to whatever needs to be covered. It can be removed and re-applied, but I wouldn't recommend trying this more than once.

Since it is vinyl the surface can easily be washed and will resist staining and fading. Wendy tells me the store she visited has eight colors: two blues, two greens, two golds a red and an orange, but she thinks more might be available if you spoke nicely to the dealer and were willing to wait for him to order.

Fool-Proof Sprinklers

"I have great hopes for this stuff," said Wendy as she slipped it back in the bag. "If it turns out as nicely as I hope I may use it for the small stretch of wall in the breakfast nook and make a mural on it with various different colors. A roll is 18 inches wide and a yard length of it is 98 cents so it wouldn't be an economical wallpaper, but I think it would stand up well in the long run."

The same company also makes other vinyl coatings in a variety of designs including floral patterns, paisley and imitation marbles in a variety of colors.

Wendy had also been buying sprinklers for the garden. One she found for $1.19 is on a long green spike so it will go easily in the middle of a closely grown vegetable patch.

This sprinkler sends out a wide fan-shaped spray (when the water pressure is high, that is) but only sprays in one direction at a time. Since there are no moving parts, there is nothing to break, so it should last almost forever. The spike is 10 inches long and the sprinkler will fit a standard hose coupling.

For $1.29 she found a low flat sprinkler that will cover a circle 25 feet in diameter on a good watering day. Centrifugal force makes it work, so there are few moving parts to break. Again this will fit a standard hose.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on this column.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Needs to Recuperate

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why God lets the woman outlive her husband by about 10 years. She needs at least that much time to rest and recuperate. Pity the poor woman who's been married 50 years. I have been married 15 years, and if this man of mine doesn't go pretty soon, I pray to God that I will soon be laid to rest. I coudn't take another 35 years of this.

It's nag and brag! Rant and rave! Yell and cuss! All he has on his mind are eat, sleep and sex (especially sex). A poor woman goes to bed tired and wakes up tired. All a man is good for is his paycheck.

I've heard women talk about how lonely they are after their husbands pass on. Well, here is one who is looking forward to that day. Sign me . . . "Tired, Tired, Tired in Long Beach"

DEAR TIRED: Too bad you didn't sign your name. A husband is entitled to know how his wife feels about him. He may want to hire a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: I come very close to being the person described by CO-WORKER. (She raises her children on the telephone on company time.)

Suppose a woman finds herself widowed or divorced with children to suppport? What are her alternatives? She could:

1. Go on relief.
2. Steal.
3. Sponge off her relatives.
4. Entertain men for money.
5. Do as I did. Go to work.

My children are too old for baby sitters. The hours between after school and the time I get home from work are few, and I don't think their being alone during that time can be called letting them raise themselves.

My children are told that I am available to them by phone if they have any questions, and I made that clear to my boss when I took this job. My children receive more supervision and attention than children from homes where Mother never leaves home except for bridge parties and club meetings.

If you were in my position, Abby, which alternative would you choose? Working Mother

DEAR MOTHER: The one you chose.

DEAR ABBY: I wish you had been more positive in stating that it is a father's duty to make an effort to meet every young man who comes to take his daughter out.

My husband was one of those fathers who was either not at home, or was too busy to meet his daughter's dates, and now we have a grandchild whose father he never met until he had to ask him to marry his daughter. (Sign me) "Bitter."

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Boys Think French

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — At Dartmouth Academy, a private boys' school here, five-year-olds from English homes aren't simply taught French, they are taught in French.

Headmaster C. H. Gregory said the new teaching method has met with remarkable success in its first year.

When the school announced its French-only program last year, many parents objected and withdrew their children. Many parents of the boys who remained in the school are keeping up with their offspring now, studying a second language in night classes.

Boys aged 5 to 9 are taught Grades 2 to 5 in French, except for special English classes to keep them up to date in their own language. After Grade 5 French classes are continued, but at a lesser rate.

Mr. Gregory says the teaching method does away "with seven wasted years"—a fault he finds with most Nova Scotia schools who don't introduce a second language until the seventh grade.

"As a school subject it was getting nowhere at all," he says.

But by learning in French, some of the boys have already learned to think in both languages without mentally translating, he said.

In more ways than one, the school is looking to the future.

"It isn't 1969 we are concerned about," says Mr. Gregory. "It's 1979, 1984, when these children will be getting jobs, hopping on jets to Paris and coming back home for supper."

Turkish Gov't Victory Seen

By RALPH JOSEPH

ANKARA (CP) — Another victory is predicted here for the ruling Justice party in Turkey's general election scheduled for Oct. 12.

This would seem remarkable in view of recent inept moves by Premier Suleyman Demirel, playing against master politician Ismet Inonu of the Republican People's party. But observers here believe the Justice party still commands a sufficiently large majority among the conservative peasants to be able to hold its own at the polls.

The Turkish peasants have right-wing inclinations, perhaps because they have not had to contend with powerful landlords since Ottoman days, since large landholdings were disallowed as being possible rival sources of power to the central government.

But the peasants' tendency to lump religion with politics is rather more to the point here. It is taken to mean that Kemal Ataturk's reforms did not penetrate to village level, and the villagers' espousal of the right-wing opponents of the Republican People's party, founded by Ataturk, is seen as a reaction to his reforms, many of which brushed aside the more backward religious practices.

OUSTED BY PEASANTS

The left-of-centre Republicans were weakened in 1967 when a splinter group, claiming that the party was drifting too far to the left, formed the Reliance party. But, still dedicated to the reformist principle of separation of church and state, the Republican People's party finds the religious conservatism in the villages its principle obstacle.

Indeed, the peasant vote swept it from office in 1950, when the ultra-right Democrats came to power, and again in 1965, when the Justice party was elected. In fact, one of the chief criticisms the Republican People's party supporters direct against the Justice party—made up mostly of old Democrats—is that it encourages fanaticism, as happened a few days back when fanatics stopped funeral prayers for a liberal anti-clerical judge, Imran Oktem.

Inono (pronounced In-er new) has behind him the bulk of the intellectuals, the students, the army officers and the left-wing forces in the towns—as it happens, practically all the elements that make modern Turkey modern. But collectively, these make for a minority at the polling booth.

This has created a feeling of frustration among those who believe the country is not moving forward as fast as it should. A frequent rightist criticism heard against the army officers is that they are forever looking for excuses to push the Justice party from power as they did the Democrats.

The criticism is probably baseless, but it nearly proved true in recent weeks when the Justice party started a move to restore the political rights of some 400 former Democrats condemned at the 1960 trials after an army coup. The Justice party, however, lacked the two-thirds majority in the Grand National Assembly to be able to effect the constitutional amendment needed. It seemed about to make an election issue of it to obtain the necessary two-thirds assembly seats.

Whispers then got around that the army officers, determined not to allow the Democrats to regain power, would intervene if Demirel got his two-thirds majority at the polls and pressed the bill. At this point Inonu made a shrewd move. He gave his party's support to the bill, thus providing the required two-third assembly votes even before the elections.

FORESTALLS ARMY

Political pundits here thought Inonu had merely forestalled Demirel from making an election issue of the Democrats' rights. But as the Yeni Gazete saw it, Inonu's move was meant to prevent army intervention: as traditional Republican People's party supporters, the army would be deprived of a moral excuse to intervene if that party threw its weight behind the bill.

However, even after the bill passed the assembly with Republican People's party support, the army unrest continued. The corruption and repression of the Democratic regime was still too fresh in the young officers' minds—though some observers believe senior officers may have feared reprisals for the 1960 coup and trials if the Democrats returned to power. President Cevdet Sunay, a fomer chief of staff, made the officers' mood clear.

Earl of Scarborough, Ex-Censor Dead

ROTHERHAM, England (AP) — The Earl of Scarbrough, 72, a former lord chamberlain, died at his home at Sandbeck Park, Rotherham.

As Britain's stage censor from 1952 to 1963, he did much to reduce theatre censorship and in 1958 ended a ban on "serious plays about homosexuality.

Lord Scarbrough, lord lieutenant of Yorkshire's West Riding, was head of English freemasonry for 17 years. He was an expert on the East, a governor of Bombay, president of the Asiatic society and parliamentary undersecretary for India and Burma.

He was a Conservative MP before the Second World War.

Rare Violin Stolen

CHICAGO (AP) — A rare Italian violin was stolen Sunday from the car of a member of the San Francisco Symphony, police said. Robert Menga, 34, said the instrument was made in 1760 and valued it at $10,000. It is one of two or three Guadanini violins still in existence, he said.

Leaking Valve Halts Apollo 11 Rehearsal

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A leaky fuel valve today interrupted a countdown rehearsal for the Apollo 11 man-on-the-moon launching.

The trouble developed just one hour, 50 minutes before the test was to end with the simulated ignition of the Saturn V rocket. Until then the lengthy test had proceeded for 5¼ days without a hitch.

Launch officials called a halt in the count and sent a four-man team of trouble-shooters to the pad to check the valve.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the valve was located on the 200-foot level of the rocket service tower and was part of a system that replenishes liquid hydrogen to the third stage.

NASA had no immediate estimate on the length of the hold. An official noted the purpose of the countdown rehearsal was to pinpoint and eliminate such problems before the final count is started.

$6 Million Study Proposed For Alaska Transportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rail and highway corridor to mineral-rich northern Alaska is being considered by the U.S. transportation department.

A spokesman said the allocation has been requested by Federal Railroad Administrator Reginald Whitman.

If Transportation Secretary John Volpe approves, the money will be available for a study of the proposed 400-mile extension of rail and road systems to above the Arctic Circle.

The proposed corridor, urged by an Alaska commission, would give access to the North Slope petroleum fields and other mineral-rich areas.

Volpe plans to inspect the North Slope area during an Alaska trip Aug. 20-30, and may also fly over the proposed transportation corridor.

In April, Volpe addressed the Commission for Northern Operation of Rail Transportation and Highways NORTH, a transportation specialist group.

PROMISED TO HELP

Volpe promised NORTH several weeks ago that his department would "assist in every possible way to establish an adequate transportation system in Alaska."

He said the Alaska Railroad, begun in 1915, "never really went as far as Congress intended."

The railway was authorized to extend from an ice-free south Alaska port 1,000 miles into the interior, but it runs only 544 miles from Seward to Fairbanks.

There has been considerable development along the completed railway and much more would result from its extension, Volpe said.

NORTH and Gov. Keath H. Miller of Alaska want the railroad extended from Fairbanks to the Arctic.

Th eroute they favor would go from Fairbanks to the Yukon at Tanana, then to Alatna. From that point, one spur would run northwest toward the Kobuk River, another north through Anaktuvuk Pass to the North Slope.

Pueblo Officer Out

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Lieut. Edward R. Murphy, executive officer of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo, has been discharged by the navy. Murphy announced his intention to resign his commission after a court of inquiry into the North Korean seizure of the ship and crew recommended administrative punishment. The navy secretary ruled, however, that no disciplinary action would be taken.

Disputes, Violence Hit Eastern Building Boom

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two major labor disputes have taken the zing out of a booming construction industry in parts of Ontario and Quebec this summer.

In Toronto, a construction strike-lockout which began May 1 continues with five key unions out of 14 still locked out. Most commercial projects in the city are affected by the 6,000 workers, who include painters, cement masons, carpenters, bricklayers and architectural glass and metal unionists.

The strike-lockout started May 1 when electricians went on strike. The industry retaliated by locking out 13 other unions, but most have since settled for wage increases ranging from $1.70 to $1.90 an hour.

But negotiations are stalled after 61 days with the five holdouts and major projects have stopped.

It is a different picture in Quebec City and the Eastern Towships where 11,000 workers, members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, are involved in a battle with builders.

HIRING HALLS AN ISSUE

At issue is a union demand for compulsory hiring halls where the construction companies would have to go to hire workers.

The strike, which started in early May, also involves higher wages and has been marked by several incidents of violence and union claims of strike breakers.

Provincial police in the areas say they lack sufficient men to check construction sites and some citizens are threatening to form vigilante committees.

Two other big disputes in Quebec have tied up iron ore production and threatened school openings in the fall.

About 1,500 employees of Wabush Mines and the Iron Ore Co. of Canada in northeastern Quebec have been on strike since May 12 to back demands for a $1-an-hour wage increase.

The strike has tied up the 65 per cent of Canada's iron ore production which comes from the Quebec-Labrador area and has reduced St Lawrence seaway traffic.

NO WORK CONTRACT

Quebec's 70,000 teachers still do not have a work contract after two years of negotiations. Their last contract expired June, 1968, and about 16,000 members of the Quebec Teachers Corp. resigned May 31.

The Quebec Federation of Catholic Boards has urged that the teachers not be rehired immediately if a contract is reached when negotiations resume July 3, threatening school opening in the fall.

In Ontario, a major strike is threatened in the nickel industry. The United Steelworkers of America, with 18,000 workers in Sudbury and Port Colborne, broke off talks Friday with the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

Their contract expires July 10 and the union is awaiting the report of a conciliation board before taking further action.

Other minor strikes have affected various points of both provinces.

In Quebec City, about 950 employees of 22 garages have been on strike for higher wages since April 16 and in Toronto, Local 183 of the Laborers' Union have been out since June 5 protesting allegedly unsafe conditions on a subway construction site.

ANAJETTE COMER . . . nudity: how do the actresses feel?

Equity Wants Nudity At a Bare Minimum

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To some of today's film actresses, no nudes is good news. Others seem to have no objection to shedding clothes on screen.

One thing is certain in a survey of today's film world: More and more female stars are being required to bare all. Nudity already is an issue on Broadway, and Actors Equity last month established firm rules for members.

Among the Equity decrees: No nudity at open interviews for stage roles; no nudity until after the member has been auditioned as a performer; actors must be informed if "acts of a sexual nature" are included in the script; members cannot perform sex acts on stage.

So far the Screen Actors Guild has no rules. "There's nothing in our contract that covers nudity," Guild President Charlton Heston has remarked He indicated that it would be a personal matter for individual performers.

How do actresses feel? I asked several who have been faced with nude scenes. Their reactions:

ACTRESSES COMMENT

Jean Seberg — "Nothing is more defeminizing than overnudity. It is possible to create the illusion of nudity without having to parade in the buff before a large contingent of film technicians. To me complete nudity is meaningless and more often than not is used as a substitute for creativity in filmmaking. Actually I have never appeared in the nude nor will I ever."

Jacqueline Bissett — "I hate it. Most other actresses love to take their clothes off, but I find it painfully embarrassing. I'm not being moralistic; I just find it terribly uncomfortable. When I first arrived here from England for The Sweet Ride, I was told my first scene would show me nude in the ocean. then I was to be raped by 25 members of a motorcycle gang. I told my agent I was going back home. They cut the rape down to one person, but I still had to do the nude scene."

Anjanette Comer — "If the public wants it, I say yes, an actress should do a nude scene in a motion picture. That's exactly the situation I faced while filming Rabbitt, Run. My feeling was if it makes money for the people producing the film, it's good for me. If sex is commercial and we know it is, then I say let's do it."

Joan Hacket — "Maybe it's because we're new at it — but for the most part, the nude scenes in American movies never give me a feeling that I'm glad to be a member of the human race. We're so heavy-handed and adolescent about it . . . It seems to me that nudity should happen naturally on film. It's got to flow with the action . . . Actors should take a good look at the motivation for nudity on film, and then decide whether it's worth doing."

$85,000 A Week For Carson

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Carson has signed a multiple-year contract with the National Broadcasting Co. that is reported to make him the highest paid entertainer in television history.

Industry sources guessed that Carson, host of the Tonight show, might be earning up to $85,000 a week over a two- or three-year period. He received $1,000,000 a year under his old contract.

Don Durgin, president of NBC-TV, said Tuesday that Carson got "a good increase and one that I think he richly deserved." He declined to disclose the terms of the contrtact.

HIP YOUNG RECORD MAN TUNED TO BIG SOUNDS

TORONTO (CP) — Doug Riley is under 30, hip, Canadian and an empire builder.

Riley is a partner in Revolution Recording Co. which is rapidly developing a stable of Canadian artists. It already includes Diane Brooks, an internationally known blues singer, The Mother Lode, a blues-rock band, and a folk duo of David Wiffen, formerly of Three's a Crowd, and Sandy Crawley, son of the owner of Ottawa's Crawley Films Ltd.

Riley wrote an album for Ray Charles, one of the world's most famous blues singer, and plans to write others for Diane Brooks; Moe Koffman, who made it big with his flute playing the Swinging Shepherd Blues, and Tommy Ambrose, who had his own CBC shows a few years back.

He is considered one of the leading authorities on who's who in the Toronto music field. If you want a Spanish-speaking female drummer with black hair who specializes in Nashville jazz, call Doug.

He began his musical career playing piano and organ for advertising jingles to pay his way through University of Toronto's faculty of music.

One night he was recording a jingle to advertise a candy bar and everything was going wrong. Riley stepped in himself, did the score, and the clients loved it.

Riley joined Mort Ross and became one of Canada's most prolific and profitable jingle-writing teams. But jingles finally became boring.

"Jingles are very restricting," he said in an interview. "Both Mort and I wanted to get into something with more challenge."

The challenge was Revolution Records.

Revolution has its own recording engineer and their recording studio should be open for business in August.

Hereditary Chiefs Oppose Compulsory Citizenship'

OHSWEKEN, Ont. (CP) — The Long House people of the Six Nations Indians have sent a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau protesting proposed federal legislation which would give Indians full equality with whites, rescind the Indian Act, and transfer responsibilities for Indians to the provinces.

Copies were sent to former prime minister John Diefenbaker, Opposition leader Robert Stanfield, and Frank Howard, NDP member for Skeena.

The letter says "full citizenship" for Indians is "legally and morally wrong."

"Our treaties were made to last as long as the grass grows, the water flows and the sun shines."

It says "compulsory citizenship" is contrary to the United Nations bill of rights, and asks an immediate meeting with the government.

The Long House people, about 1,500 strong, are led by hereditary chiefs of the Six Nations. They adhere to the old traditions, their own religion and celebrate the ancient feasts during the year.

The hereditary chiefs still retain treaty-making rights for the Six Nations, although day-to-day administration of the reserve, 10 miles southeast of Brantford, Ont., is handled by an elected council.

The hereditary chiefs and the elected council met Sunday to discuss the proposed federal action and discuss differences that have existed since the elected council system was imposed in 1924.

JACQUIE PERRIN

Ailing Queen Rose to Occasion

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A beauty queen came out of hospital Tuesday night to crown her successor, Jacquie Perrin, a 21-year-old brunette from Toronto.

Miss Perrin, a 34-24-36 university student, fought back tears when she was named Miss Dominion of Canada over 16 other contestants in the glittering ballroom of the Sheraton-Brock Hotel.

But much of the applause from the 1,000 spectators went to her predecessor, Nancy Wilson, who came out of hospital after internal surgery to take part in the ceremony.

Miss Wilson was helped up and down the stairs, but walked down the runway on her own to a standing ovation.

Runner-up was Christiane Philion, 20, of Kamloops, B.C., and second runner-up was Sharon Forbes, 22, of Moncton, N.B.

Miss Perrin, the 1968 Miss Toronto Argonaut, told a news conference she felt "very fortunate."

"I couldn't believe it until they announced my name. I feel just wonderful."

Miss Perrin's father, James, works in public relations and is a boating columnist for a Toronto newspaper.

STUDIES GEOGRAPHY

Miss Perrin is entering her third year as a geography major at York University and is working for the summer as a secretary.

She will attend a lobster festival at Pictou, N.S., and then compete in the Miss Universe pageant in Miami July 19. The Miss World competition in Britain next November is also on her calendar.

Miss Philion is a former student at the University of British Columbia and is working as a public relations consultant. She was crowned Miss Kamloops in 1968. The chestnut-eyed brunette measures 35-24-35½.

Miss Forbes, 34-26-36, is a student at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton and is a graduate of New Brunswick Teachers' College.

Judges were Helen Binks and Milt Shuman, both of Hamilton, Nora Stead, Niagara Falls, and Eileen Reynolds of Hamilton, 1959 winner of the pageant.

O'Keefe Centre Struggles

TORONTO (CP) — When O'Keefe Centre opened in 1960 with Richard Burton, Julie Andrews and Robert Goulet starring in Camelot, everyone was certain the centre would be a winner. But its first nine years have been a financial struggle.

Donald Ross is chairman of the seven-man committee appointed in 1968 to manage the theatre when Metropolitan Toronto took over operation of the centre from Canadian Breweries.

"It's a white elephant," he says. "It's vastly over-equipped . . . there's stuff in there that hasn't even been used yet."

Hugh Walker, president and general manager of the centre who has been connected with the $10,000,000 building since it was a pencil line on a blueprint, is an optimist.

"With all this talk about money losses and costs I wonder how many people realize that we've never lost more than $50,000 a year since we've been operating," Mr. Walker says. "And in the theatre business that's quite good."

Mr. Ross says one of the problems in booking major shows in the O'Keefe is the rate of exchange with the United States dollar.

CUTS PROFIT MARGIN

"The usual arrangement is a 75-25-per-cent split but with the dollar difference the producers start wanting 78 per cent," Mr. Ross says. "It cuts our margin of profits and forces us to tack an extra dollar on to the ticket prices."

Also in financial straits is Ed Mirvish's Royal Alexandra Theatre. But things are looking up for the Royal Alex since last year when it made a profit for the first time in its five years of operation under the department store owner.

The O'Keefe with its 3,000 seats has been competition for the Royal Alex since it opened, because with double the seating it grabs all the big shows.

"Now to make it even worse," Mr. Mirvish says, "the O'Keefe is run on taxpayers' money. I can't compete."

Adding to the headaches of both the O'Keefe and Royal Alex will be the opening soon of another municipal theatre next door to the O'Keefe, called the St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts.

Mayor Moore, in charge there, has already suggested that Mr. Mirvish apply for a municipal subsidy the same as O'Keefe and St. Lawrence, but Mr. Mirvish will have nothing to do with it.

"To have to answer to city hall?" he says. "There wouldn't be enough money in all the planets."

WON'T GIVE UP

Ed Mirvish won't give up, and he plans to make more profit. This summer he's out to undercut the $2 movie with theatre seats at the Alex starting at $1.50 for a run of five comedies.

He made his start in Toronto with his huge bargain store called Honest Ed's and today is a possible mayoralty candidate.

He says if he owned both the O'Keefe and the Royal Alex he could make them go—"you could have one box office for both theatres."

But Donald Ross of the O'Keefe Centre is discussing the same arrangement with the St. Lawrence Centre.

Human Rights Get Fresh Look

By ELIZABETH FORBES

The new Human Rights Act that went into eject in this province a short time ago, may not be perfect but it is a start in the right direction.

Forbes

It doesn't correct all human wrongs but it does pinpoint many of them and fundamentally, it points the way to correcting some of them.

It is now the work of interested persons and organizations to study this new Act, decide where it has weaknesses and then expose those weaknesses whenever and wherever possible.

One of the first opportunities to do this might well be on August 19, when it has been announced the Human Rights Commission will hold a public meeting in the Law Courts here.

Before attempting to take a constructive part in discussions however, it is my definite belief that any interested person or concerned organization must fully understand what is meant by human rights in order to recognize the violations.

★ ★ ★

Once these rights are fully understood, the next responsibility is to promote them, for others as well as ourselves.

That responsibility begins with the people around us for it is in our own communities that we have most influence.

Human rights are based on our increasing demand for a life in which the dignity of each human being will be respected and protected, far beyond the comfort and conveniences that science and technology can provide.

This does not mean merely biological needs. It means those conditions of life which allow us to develop and use our qualities of intelligence and conscience to satisfy our emotional and spiritual needs.

In the universal declaration adopted and proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948, two kinds of rights are broadly recognized.

First, the traditional kind, civil and political rights, which gradually evolved over the centuries and second, economic, social and cultural rights, recognized more recently when people began to realize the first would be valueless without the second.

This second grouping, of course, is based on the right to work, to free choice of jobs; to just and favorable conditions of work and to protection against unemployment.

It includes the belief that every man or woman should be entitled to the same pay if he or she does the same work.

That all of us should have the right to rest and leisure, an adequate standard of living and enough food, clothing, housing, medical and social services and social security. And that everyone should have the right to education and the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community.

It's a very tall order and we will never be able to fill it until we (as individuals and as organizations) know much more about human rights. And then make our voices heard, loud and clear.

For instances let's take the clause that says every man and woman should be entitled to the same pay if he or she does the same work.

It's common knowledge that there is a strong trend in industry, businesses and in the professions for women to be paid less than their male counterparts.

★ ★ ★

It is also known that, in some cases, women are so eager to work they will accept the lesser pay rather than take a chance of losing their jobs.

Our new Human Rights Act (which now embodies the Equal Pay Act) proposes to plug this loophole (section 4, clause 1), by saying that no female employee shall be paid less than a male employee "for the same work or substantially the same work done in the same establishment."

I'm not convinced that the words "substantilly the same work" are strong enough. And I hope that if the Human Rights Commission meeting on August 19 in the Law Courts is prepared to hear suggested changes in the new Act that some individual or interested organization will suggest a wording that would clearly plug this contentious loophole for all time.

Britain Looks to Tougher Sanctions Against Rhodesians

LONDON (CP) — The British government is anxious to invigorate United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia, an official said today.

He said the government believes the best move is to bring increasing pressure on Western governments to forbid shipping lines from carrying Rhodesian cargo.

The UN has discovered that despite the embargoes, Rhodesia, under control of the Ian Smith regime, has managed to export about $260,000,000 worth of goods a year, including about $100,000,000 worth shipped outside of Africa.

Britain, through its own form of intelligence, has been keeping an eye on the shipments and has tipped the UN each time a Western ship appears to have breached the sanctions, carrying in Rhodesian copper, chrome, tobacco or other goods.

In the past, this periodic tipping has been done on a confidential basis but in recent weeks the information has been leaked to the public.

This increased British publicity is linked with Prime Minister Smith's new constitution which entranches white minority control over Rhodesia's future and severs all Rhodesian links with Britain.

The Commonwealth has established a special seven-country working party to determine how sanctions against Rhodesia might be tightened and extended and there is some talk that action should be taken to prohibit postal and other communications.

The British government is ready to study the idea of a postal curb but there does not appear to be much enthusiasm in official quarters for such a move.

This big emphasis is to point out that Britain probably is the only country that vigilantly watches over the shipping lanes.

As the result of one tip to the UN, a cargo of Rhodesian chrome destined for a Mediterranean port was shunted from one country to another and now finally has been split into two lots, stored in ports in Lisbon and Barcelona.

Both Portugal and South Africa have openly flaunted the UN sanctions and maintain full trade links with Rhodesia.

Sleepy City-State Shows Handiwork of Lee

By LEWIS M. SIMONS

SINGAPORE (AP) — "Lee Kuan Yew is a dictator," says a retired police officer.

"Lee may be all-powerful, but he's what Singapore needs," says a British businessman. "He put this place on its feet."

"My children go to English school, I have a job and we live in a clean flat," says a taxi driver. "Without Lee Kuan Yew we would have none of this."

"Mr. Lee Kuan Yew is too clever by half," says Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman.

Somewhere among these divergent opinions of Singapore's dynamic young prime minister lies the real Lee Kuan Yew. Whatever he may be, Singapore today is what he has made it.

Yew, 46, is a hard-fisted ruler who directs his People's Action party and most of the former British colony's 2,000,000 polyglot population with demanding severity.

At the same time, not even his most outspoken critics can deny that Lee has altered the face of Singapore for the benefit of the island's people. It is almost unrecognizable as the sleepy city-state it was when he elbowed his way into office 10 years ago behind an unsmiling, hard-lined mouth.

RAHMAN WARY

There are frequently strained relations between Lee and his easy-going Malaysian neighbor, Rahman. Longtime observers of Singapore-Malaysia relations claim that when the two leaders meet, Rahman automatically says "No" to any proposal Lee makes, fearing the brilliant Singaporean will trap him.

Lee's most obvious accomplishments are seen on the streets.

Hundreds of high-rise workers' apartment blocks tower from the flat, red earth over the 224-square-mile island, which forms the dot at the end of the Malay Peninsula's exclamation point.

More than 600,000 Singaporeans now live in this efficient, if somewhat sterile, housing.

On street after street in the traffic-choked downtown section, modern office buildings and luxury hotels are shooting up.

Thirty-three hotels with more than 9,000 rooms are being built or are on the boards.

Giant tankers and cargo ships from virtually every seafaring nation steam in and out of the superb harbor, making this the world's fourth-most-active port.

At the new Jurong Industrial Estate, a Lee Kuan Yew scheme of vast proportions, bulldozers and steam shovels gobble up earth, making hills disappear while swamplands harden under transported fill. Some 3,000 feet of dredged deep-water wharf hugs the Jurong area, providing sea transport for the multitude of factories and plants springing up.

WELCOME PROBLEMS

Dockyards are being enlarged to enable Singapore to service tankers up to 200,000 tons.

Such gains are impressive, both to the outsider and the citizen of Singapore. "Singapore's problems are the kind other countries in this region would like to have," a Western diplomat says.

The national per-capita income is nearly twice that of Malaysia and indicates Singapore's high living standard in Southeast Asia.

Many of the poorest Singaporeans live in ramshackle attap, or thatch, huts, but they seem to have few complaints. One attap dweller, a Chinese cane furniture-maker, says: "We have plenty to eat, we are clothed and housed. We are happy."

Food is plentiful and cheap. The night markets are steamy pinpoints of activity.

The dress of the island's people is as varied and colorful as the food:

Bearded Sikhs with tightly-wound turbans; old Chinese men in wraparound, baggy trousers; young Chinese girls in slit-to-the-thigh mini cheong sams; Malay women in hip-hugging sarongs and waist-cinching blouses known as kebayas; Indian girls in modified hipster saris and others.

There are Singaporeans and outside observers who fear the growing power of the puritanical Lee Kuan Yew government.

"There is integrity in government," says native-born lawyer David Marshall. "But there is no humanity. Singapore humanity is being transformed into ants."

A former civil service clerk observes: "The people in Singapore think the government is efficient, very efficient. But they also think it's too strict."

The government, which holds every seat in the 51-seat Parliament, is strict indeed. Not even Lee's own cabinet ministers deny this.

Modern Singapore Is What He Made It

"Emerging nations are like airplanes in a storm," Foreign Minister S. Rajaratnam says. "The captain must be able to make decisions without interference."

What is needed, says Rajaratnam, a former newspaper man, is "democracy without over-attention to democratic principles."

"Once we give full vent to the principles of democracy, as is going on in the United States today and as has been tried in some Southeast Asian countries with dismal failure, we make effective governing impossible."

The government directly controls radio and television, indirectly controls the press through licensing, controls education by issuing or not issuing "suitability certificates" to students, controls workers through stringent labor laws. It can deprive citizens of citizenship, may jail suspected subversives for life without trial and has effectively removed all political opposition. A bill soon to be passed by Parliament will eliminate trial by jury.

While critics such as Marshall, Singapore's first minister under British rule, decry Lee's "power politics," the government has shown itself to be an effective force in crisis.

REDS GO UNDERGROUND

In the May 13 race war in Malaysia, informed sources say, 1,200 persons—most of them Chinese—were killed in the federation. A flurry of racial incidents broke out in Singapore, too. Within a week, police and military troops had swept through every trouble spot on the island, making arrests and screening suspects. In all, four persons were reported killed.

Communism, always a fear in this corner of Southeast Asia, is apparently not taken too seriously by the government. "They have become an anachronism," Foreign Minister Rajaratnam observes.

Marshall, 66, describes himself as "pathologically anti-Communist." He says the Communists, who went underground when Lee came into power, are a growing force. "They're attracting the frustrated intelligentsia" of the city-state's Chinese, he says.

The Chinese represent about four-fifths of the total population. The rest are mostly Malays and Indians.

One problem, which nobody in Singapore denies, is unemployment.

Nearly 20,000 students spill onto Singapore's job market every year, their numbers far from absorbed by burgeoning industry. Of some 550,000 persons fit for work, about 50,000 are idle.

The removal of British troops east of Suez, to be completed by the end of 1971, and the resultant closure of their giant military bases here will put 30,000 Singaporeans out of jobs.

SEEK NEW INDUSTRY

The British withdrawal hangs heavy, but with typical zest Lee is trying to take up the slack. He has converted a former Royal Navy shipyard to civilian use and is planning other conversions.

Local diplomats and business leaders regularly travel around the world, seeking investors and tourists. The search for new industry appears to be effective. But a government estimate shows only some 5,000 industrial jobs are created each year, sometimes at a cost of $10,000 apiece.

The government is fostering two bills, to liberalize abortion and sterilization, which it claims are needed "on medical, social and humanitarian grounds." Opponents call the bills desperate attempts to cut population growth and ease the unemployment crisis.

This, in part, is Singapore 150 years after its founding by Sir Stamford Raffles.

Her ambitious prime minister calls it the "Rugged Society."

LEE KUAN YEW
. . . dictator?

Others term it a technological society and a pragmatic society.

Complains one disenchanted citizen: "No one calls it a human society."

Bridge Plan Wins Praise

EDMONTON (CP) — Brian Eldred, a third-year student at the University of Manitoba school of architecture, has sparked the interest of Edmonton city officials with his prize-winning solution to a bridge-building problem.

The problem was to design a bridge which would carry traffic across the North Saskatchewan River as economically as possible without destroying the treed river banks either through construction of the bridge or through commercial development.

Mr. Eldred designed a high-level bridge, from the top of the south bank to the top of the north bank, which would incorporate parking, stores, restaurants, a mall, a merchandise mart, an auditorium and apartments on several lower levels.

The commercial elements of the bridge would help defray construction costs. Top levels of the concrete structure would carry both rapid transit and vehicular traffic.

Mr. Eldred, 27, won a scholarship in France for his design.

"It's such a good idea," said Edmonton Mayor Ivor Dent when shown the proposal. He suggested it should be submitted to city council and passed on to the city engineer for formal consideration.

Mr. Eldred said he would be willing to submit the design to the city of Edmonton. He said his main thought when working on the design was that the bridge would "pay for itself" through revenue earned by the city on space rentals and leases.

DON'T KNOW COST

If Edmonton is to build the bridge, it would have to compete with a bridge in the same location—upstream from the present high-level bridge—planned for in the Metropolitan Edmonton Transportation Study, the city's guide to future roadway development.

Costs haven't been worked out yet, Mr. Eldred said, since they were not part of the competition. But based on the bridge's estimated 2,700,000 square feet of concrete, Edmonton city officials said a good price guess would be $54,000,000.

Aside from the revenue aspect, other problems to be considered by the city would be esthetics in relation to the river valley and air space rights, which are owned by the federal government, said Mayor Dent.

The bridge, 3,000 feet long and at least 150 feet high, would not be higher than the top of the river bank. The height of the bridge's underside from the water would be at least 70 feet.

"I was very much impressed," said Eugene Olekshy, an Edmonton architect and the only Canadian on the panel of judges who awarded the prize to Mr. Eldred.

Of 10 pylons planned in this model, only two would actually be in the water. The others would be supporting the bridge on land, and well into its new approaches. Air circulation for the sub-levels would be supplied through air ducts which would act as a traffic divider on the top deck.

McCRAE — In loving memory of our son, Stewart James McCrae who passed away July 2, 1968.
The fairest lillies are the first to fall,
The sweetest first to fade;
The fondest, dearest, best of all,
At peaceful rest is laid.
As some sweet blossom droops and dies
When blighted by the frost,
He faded from before her eyes,
And all too soon was lost.
But in God's garden free from pain,
Where grow His fairest flowers,
We know that we shall meet again,
This fairest bloom of ours.
In God we trust. Always remembered, Mom and Dad.

Motel Application Rejected

An application by Austin C. Mitchell to build a 12-unit motel and restaurant at the corner of Oak Bay and Yale was turned down by Oak Bay council Monday.

Also Monday, J. M. Cook, 1391 Victoria, asked council whether an apartment block which Tudor Estates Ltd. proposed to build in the 2000 block of Granite meant that council had given carte blanche to apartment building in that area.

Ald. Frances Elford assured him that each developer's application would be considered on an individual basis.

A motion by Ald. Wallace that a resolution be submitted to the Union of B.C. Municipalities asking that the provincial government acquire a more realistic formula for assessments was tabled until further study had been made.

Wallace was assured that the resolution would be drawn up before the July 18 deadline for presenting motions to be made at the UBCM meeting.

HOME GARDEN

Planning Those Window Boxes

By HILDA BEASTALL

At first glance we may seem to be going backward in our gardening as we become more involved in planters, tubs and movable containers. These are an outgrowth of the window boxes and terrace containers of the late Victorian era we consider old fashioned. Our increasing need for outdoor relaxation at home triggers also the need for less work and less cultivated ground, with a maximum number of easily tended plants providing harmony and color of foliage and flowers.

Hilda

This brings us around to raised beds, or planters, and tubs or other more or less movable containers.

With the increasing number of apartments and other multiple family dwellings being erected, more of these soil containers will be in use in this country than we have seen before. Window boxes will come back, but instead of wood, they may be of concrete, pottery, cemented stones and rocks or some form of artificial material not yet in common use.

We shall need to learn from European cities which have had generations of apartment dwellers, yet every country developed types of balcony plants suited to its climatic and temperamental conditions.

These thoughts came to mind recently when noticing the beauty of flowering annuals in window boxes set on a wooden porch of an old city house.

The lot was narrow and the house high. Other houses crowded in on all sides and it would have required specialized talents to make an acceptable garden on the property.

In spite of these apparent disadvantages, someone with understanding hands and imagination had created a beauty spot.

The old wooden porch faced into the northwest, and glowing in late evening sunshine were boxes filled to overflowing with petunias and shizanthuses.

The latter are grown every year in Victoria's street hanging baskets, and admired gardeners who unfortunately know them by a half-dozen common names. Butterfly-flower and Poor-Man's-Orchid are but two.

With no surroundings to either enhance or detract, the glow of the perfectly blended pinks and purples was inspiring.

May the creator of this magic piece of beauty continue to exercise his talents in window box gardening wherever he may find himself!

YOUR HEALTH

Interesting Facts On Smoking Dangers

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Of late I have read a number of books on smoking, its dangers, and how to stop using tobacco. The one I enjoyed most is "Tobacco and Your Health; The Smoking Controversy," by Dr. Harold S. Diehl. It is so authoritative because, for a number of years since his retirement as Dean of the Medical School of the University of Minnesota, he has been senior vice-president of the American Cancer Society for Research and Medical Affairs.

Alvarez

For the last 10 years, he has been much interested in the effects of smoking on health, and particularly on the production of cancer and other diseases. As a result, he knows the facts, and the results of the many studies of this subject — practically all of them showing how much harm heavy smoking can do, and how it can shorten the person's life.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Diehl is a fine, friendly man; a great humanitarian, a great teacher, a great gatherer of facts, and a fine writer of interesting prose. I cannot imagine how any open-minded person could fail to be impressed by such facts as that in a large group of persons, 110 of the smokers died of lung cancer, while only 12 of the non-smokers suffered from the disease. Also, 15 smokers died of that distressing disease called emphysema, while only one non-smoker got it. Dr. Diehl has a table showing that the more cigarettes a person smokes each day, the greater the dangers of illness are.

For the smokers who ask me, "But how do I quit?" I can strongly recommend the section of the book, Appendix D, in which Dr. Diehl lists dozens of hints for stopping smoking. He says millions have given up cigarettes; some found this easy, most found it difficult or very distressing. In two weeks or so, the person will lose that hacking morning cough, that thick phlegm, and perhaps that uncomfortable mouth. Food will taste better, and a bad breath may go.

Vacation time is best for quitting. Then the person should exercise much; spend spare time in places like libraries where smoking is forbidden; go to movies; a little white inhaler will open up the nose. Instead of a cigarette, try a mouth wash. Keep busy. Use the money you save on cigarettes to buy yourself presents. Some should quit "cold turkey," that is, suddenly, without any tapering-off period. Some shouldn't do it that way. Some shift to a pipe, which is not so bad, because the smoke is not inhaled into the lungs. It is a good idea to throw away your ash trays.

Dr. Diehl has many other fine ideas and helpful tips about how to stop. He discusses various drugs, and their advantages or disadvantages.

★ ★ ★

In recent weeks, I have received dozens of letters from people who were either mentally disturbed themselves or had a mentally disturbed child. Some are getting great help from the wonderful book on the distress of a depression, recenlty published, written by Mrs. Barbara Field Benziger, called "The Prison of My Mind."

Mrs. Benziger describes so honestly the factors of heredity and unhappiness in childhood and marriage which caused her nerves to break, and she tells of the terrible mental hospital in which she found herself incommunicado and locked in.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Canada Invasion Was Only a Lark

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1812 the U.S.A. declared war on Britain with the idea of capturing Canada. The "war hawks" of those days believed that most Canadians wanted to be liberated from "British tyranny" and would flock to the American colors.

Bowman

Dr. Eustis, U.S. Secretary of War, predicted that it would be necessary to send only officers because Canadians would fill the ranks.

However, a force of 2,500 men was given the honor of spearheading the invasion, led by General William Hull. He was so overconfident that he allowed his officers and men to bring the wives and families to see the fun. One month before the U.S.A. declared war, Hull announced at Dayton, Ohio, that his force was going to invade Canada, and he sent his own luggage to Detroit in an American schooner.

When the ship entered the Detroit River from Lake Erie on July 2, a British patrol ship drew alongside and gave the order to stop. Then a boarding party made a search and found General Hull's baggage, and documents revealing details of the campaign! So the British knew that the U.S. plan was to cross the river at Detroit, and also make an additional attack on St. Joseph's Island near Sault Ste. Marie, to cut off communications between Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

The American over-confidence was not only due to the mistaken belief that Canadians wanted to be liberated. There were only 4,450 regular troops in Canada, and not more than 1,500 of them were guarding the long frontier west of Montreal. When Hull arrived at Detroit with his 2,500 men, there were only 150 British-Canadian regulars, 300 militia, and 150 Indians opposing them.

Nevertheless, Hull's invasion was a fiasco, a story that will be told on the appropriate date.

Other events on July 2:

1603. Champlain arrived at Lachine rapids.

1679 Daniel Greysolon (DuLhut) claimed Red River area for France.

1686 Pierre LeMoyne d'Iberville captured Fort Rupert, Hudson Bay.

1749 Thirteen transports of colonists arrived at Halifax.

1808 Simon Fraser reached the Pacific.

1821 Imperial act regulated fur trade in Northwest and Hudson Bay.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

For the next two weeks the Times will feature a new bridge column written by one of the world's great Life Masters, Fred Karpin. Introducer of the "point-count system," Karpin is the author of seven books on bridge which have sold more than a million copies.

The Times would appreciate an indication from its bridge fan readers as to acceptance of the Karpin column and whether it might be preferred to the regular column.

Every bridge player has learned—usually through bitter experiences—that minor suit game contracts are to be avoided; and that whenever a game-type hand appears to be heading towards five clubs or five diamonds, to make every effort to channelize that game elsewhere.

From the expert point of view, the only time he ever gets to five clubs or five diamonds is when all else has failed, and nothing else is left. In these circumstances, he bids the minor suit game because "it's the only game in town."

The deal diagrammed below arose in a rubber-bridge game. Two experienced players, sitting North and South, illustrated how minor suit game contracts can be avoided.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 8 5 ♡ 7 4 ◇ Q J 10 6 3 ♣ A K 7 2
WEST ♠ A Q 9 4 ♡ J 10 9 6 ◇ 9 5 ♣ J 8 6		EAST ♠ J 10 7 3 ♡ K Q 5 2 ◇ - ♣ Q 10 9 5 4
	SOUTH ♠ K 6 2 ♡ A 8 3 ◇ A K 8 7 4 2 ♣ 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

In a purely technical sense, North could not have been criticized if he had chosen to make a three-diamond response over South's opening one-diamond bid. Had he done so, South would have bid five diamonds. With the normal opening lead of the heart jack by West, declarer would have gone down one, since the loss of a heart and two spades would be inevitable.

But North knew not to jump to three diamonds at once, since this bid would have tended to drive South to five diamonds (after all, no South could be that clairvoyant to know that North had the ace and king of clubs). So North temporized by bidding two clubs, intending to raise South's diamonds on the next round of bidding.

After North had bid three diamonds, South was at the crossroads, in a sense. The question was whether to go on to game at five diamonds, or whether to bid the game at three no-trump for nine tricks. Knowing that all suits were protected, and that North's raise in diamonds probably consolidated his diamond suit, South bid three no-trump. As is evident, nine tricks were there for the taking, no matter what West opened.

New Democratic Youth Want More Radical Leftist Stance

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Youth wound up a four - day biennial convention here Tuesday with a consensus for a more radical leftist program for the New Democratic Party.

But the manifesto which the youth wing will present to the national meeting of the senior party in Winnipeg in October will have to be drafted by the executive.

Eight resolutions which were to form the basis of the manifesto never reached the floor of the conference for debate.

The convention was thrown into turmoil Tuesday when the newly-elected president, 25-year-old W. J. Lenihan of Saskatoon resigned "for personal and family reasons."

Chris Thurrock of Halifax was acclaimed to the presidency in his stead.

Mr. Lenihan's resignation sparked a major dispute over the youth group's relations with the NDP — a dispute which had brewed throughout the conference.

The delegates, representing all provinces except New Brunswick and Newfoundland, spent the day in a closed "struggle session" called to redefine the aims and structure of the NDY.

A leftward split with the senior party dominated much of the conference discussion. Delegates has attacked NDP candidates who advocated continuation of the free enterprise system.

Others called for a complete rejection of U.S. ownership of Canadian industry.

But Mr. Thurrock, like Mr. Lenihan and outgoing president Ken Novakowski of Edmonton, advocated working within the party for a more socialist trend to party policies.

The only resolution to be passed by the convention was a pledge of support for Quebec's "right to self-determination" and alliance with Quebec socialists.

New Allied Commander Takes Over

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster took over Tuesday as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe.

He pledged himself to the collective security of the nations in the Atlantic alliance, which he said enables the Western world "to rise above those divisions which brought devastation in the past.

Goodpaster, 54, succeeded another American, Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, in a military ceremony at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe.

Lemnitzer, 69, is retiring after 51 years in service. His staff says it is the longest U.S. military career of this century.

Salute to Youth Opens Stampede

CALGARY (CP) — The finishing touches were being put to a western facade today as the city sharpened its cowtown image for the tourist onslaught that usually comes with the Calgary Exhibition and the Stampede.

Billed on posters as The Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth, the 57th Stampede starts Thursday.

As the normal rhythmic pulse of this oiltown turned into an unrelenting gallop, downtown stores adopted early western fronts as they sought the tourist eye.

The 10-day stampede, built this year on a theme of Salute to Youth, begins tonight for at least 3,000 teen-agers who are scheduled to participate in a youth parade.

The parade will be headed by Olympic swimming star Elaine Tanner of Vancouver. Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Alberta Premier Harry Strom will be on the reviewing stand.

The regular stampede parade takes place Monday morning.

Although the downtown pace borders on the hectic, the most feverish activity is around the stampede grounds, nestled in a bend in the Elbow River in the southeast section of the city.

Here among the brightly colored Salute to Youth exhibits are a mountain, made of straw bales and covered with polythene, that will be used for skiing and climbing. A Boy Scouts of Canada exhibition and a small roofed amphitheatre complete with gas flares are also featured.

A signature wall, four feet high and 90 feet long, where youths can place names and slogans has been erected not far from a paint-in where others can demonstrate their artistic inclinations.

Another building called Moods of Youth is decorated on the outside in stark contrasts with black and white figures made of rectangles, triangles and circles. Inside large cubes have been suspended from the ceiling. These have alternating black and white faces splotched with circles. On the walls are large prints showing young people captured in moods from ecstasy to melancholy. A projection screen is up front.

SET UP SIDESHOWS

Elsewhere on the grounds the Royal American Exposition has been setting up the midway rides and sideshows. The troupe arrived Monday night aboard its special train and was expected to be ready by Thursday.

Exhibitors of agricultural animals and vegetables prepared to show their prize selections to the judges and public.

'Baiting' Charge At Ben Het Denied by U.S.

By DAVID HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

The United States military command in Saigon has disputed statements by a South Vietnamese colonel that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces were used to "bait" a trap for the Viet Cong at the Ben Het special forces camp.

Marine Colonel Nguyen Ba Lien, who commands the 24th special tactical zone composed of Kontum and Pleiku Provinces, said he decided about two months ago to use Ben Het to bait the reported equivalent of two North Vietnamese divisions operating near the border of Cambodia and Laos.

By leaving the camp lightly defended, he said he hoped to trick the divisions into massing for an assault, thus exposing them to Allied air strikes and artillery.

Rocket Shells Pound Camp

Since May 6, North Vietnamese army units encircling the hilltop outpost have pounded it with 5000 or more rounds of mixed mortar, rocket and artillery fire. Among the camp's 1,000-man defence force are approximately 100 American artillery men and Special Forces advisers, who have endured considerable privation since the seige began in early June.

Colonel Lien, the ground commander, predicted Monday afternoon that four fresh South Vietnamese (ARVN) battalions advancing toward Ben Het about 50 miles miles north of here would break the siege within three days. "I think the enemy is smashed," Lien said here at his headquarters. "The battle appears ended."

By the first week of June, enemy patrols had worked their way to Ben Het's barbed wire perimeter and were daily peppering the camp with mortar and small arms fire. In one day last week, more than 300 mortar, rocket and artillery rounds fell inside the camp.

Its defenders took up residence in underground bunkers as the Communists cut the road leading to Dakto, eight miles to the east in South Vietnam's central highlands. Since June 23, all food and ammunition for the camp have been flown in from nearby bases.

In Saigon late Monday, a spokesman for the U.S. Mili-

Weir Must Quit, Says Schreyer

WINNIPEG (CP)—The New Democratic Party, its ranks bolstered by the addition of a member elected under the Liberal banner, has mustered an over-all majority in the Manitoba legislature.

With the addition of Larry Desjardins to his caucus, NDP Leader Ed Schreyer called for the resignation before Friday of Premier Walter Weir's election-battered government.

If Mr. Weir does not resign, the NDP leader told a news conference Tuesday night, he will seek the assistance of the lieutenant-governor.

Mr. Desjardins, 46, has been a Liberal member of the legislature for St. Boniface since 1959. He announced he will join the NDP caucus and sit as a Liberal-Democrat, giving the NDP a bare majority of 29 seats in the 57-member house.

Mr. Desjardins won St. Boniface handsomely in the June 25 election with 4,206 votes to 2,656 for NDP candidate Kam Gajdosik. Conservative Maurice Arpin, constitutional adviser to former premier Duff Roblin, ran third with 1,117 votes. In the 1966 general election a Conservative was second and NDP third.

More certain than ever the NDP will take power, Mr. Schreyer announced Mr. Desjardins will head a group to gather facts on Manitoba's cultural and ethnic situation, constitutional rights and the provincial centennial next year.

Mr. Desjardins' decision to switch parties removed uncertainty from the June 25 election which resulted in the NDP winning 28 seats, an increase from 12, the PCs dropped to 22 seats from 31 in the last house, Liberals to five from their official-Oposition—total of 13, one Social Crediter was re-elected and an Independent was elected.

SCHREYER

MAY NAME SPEAKER

Mr. Schreyer said he was considering appointment of Social Crediter Jake Froese as the first permanent Speaker of the house.

He said Mr. Froese, 51, and member for Rhineland since 1959, was "warmly and kindly inclined" to the offer.

If Mr. Froese is appointed only 27 non-NDP votes would remain in the legislature.

Premier Weir was not available for comment, but there was no indication he would do anything other than resign.

There is constitutional precedent, however, for him to seek a vote of confidence in the legislature or he could call another election.

EARLIEST TIME

After a caucus meeting last week, the Conservative leader set today as the earliest time at which he would make an announcement.

Liberal Leader R. W. (Bobby) Bend, who lost his bid for a Manitoba legislature seat to Resources Minister Harry Enns, had no comment on Mr. Desjardins decision. He said he would be "interested to see a definition" of the term Liberal Democrat, the status Mr. Desjardins said he will hold in the NDP caucus.

Mr. Desjardins, Liberal spokesman on French-Canadian issues in the last legislature, said Mr. Schreyer's announced approval of the federal languages bill was a factor in his decision.

Charles Sets Forth To Tour Restive Wales

CAERNARVON (CP) — Cheering yachtsmen and spectators ashore greeted Prince Charles today at the vacation resort of Llandudno as the new Prince of Wales began a four-day "meet the people" tour of his restive domain.

The 20-year-old heir to the throne had a cozy dinner party with friends before leaving Hollyhead aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

Small sailboats and yachts clustered around the Britannia when it arrived at Llandudno, on Wales' north coast, after the overnight trip from Holyhead, on the Isle of Anglesey. But security was heavy, and navy frogmen searched the Llandudno pier for bombs throughout the night.

Prince Charles landed just after 9 a.m. wearing a dark brown suit. As the royal barge moved toward the pier, he waved in acknowledgement of the cheers.

•

The prince had said he wanted to meet as many Welsh people as possible during his tour. At Llandudno town hall, he signed the visitors book and talked with local officials.

He was to visit Denbigh, Caernarvon, Merioneth, Montgomery and Cardigan Shires today before returning to spend the night aboard the Britannia off Newquay on the west coast of Wales.

There was a brief alert on a lonely mountain road near Llandudno when security men found a wire running into a manhole from a telephone pole. An RAF bomb disposal officer cut the wire minutes before the prince's cavalcade passed by.

"I am 100-per-cent certain it is not a bomb," the lieutenant said. He said it seemed to be an old telephone appliance.

•

The villagers of Bala formed their own vigilante group to guard the prince. One member of the group said, "any attempt to interfere with our plans to welcome our prince will be strongly dealt with."

The men, armed with shotguns, patrolled the area through the night, looking for anything suspicious.

Army helicopters patrolled the roads the prince used through the morning.

Security men, blanketing the countryside and clearing roads for the prince's cavalcade added a grim and sombre note.

There was another bomb scare near the town

SECURITY IN BAGS

CAERNARVON (Reuters) — Journalists covering the investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales Tuesday had to resort to a medieval method to get their copy out of 13th century Caernarvon Castle during the ceremony.

They had to put their stories in a leather pouch which was then lowered from the battlements to a messenger waiting outside.

The reason: No one was allowed out of the castle during the five-hour ceremony.

The rule was laid down for security reasons and because it was not feasible to install telephone lines in the press boxes on the castle battlements.

Reporters also ran into trouble finding out information about the security arrangements for the investiture.

Hospital Contract

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today announced the provincial government has approved a $5,000,000 contract for additions and renovations to the Penticton hospital.

That investiture went off with a bang—but nicely.

Six Planes Downed In Suez Skirmish

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel claimed its jets shot down four Egyptian MiGs in a dogfight over the Gulf of Suez today. Egypt did not confirm the losses but claimed two Israeli Mirages were shot down.

Cairo radio quoted a military communique as saying two Israeli plane formations entered Egyptian air space in the Ain el Suk Neh area, were intercepted by MiGs and two Israeli jets were shot down in the ensuing fight.

The Israeli Army said its planes encountered the MiGs while on patrol, pursued them and four of the Soviet-built planes were seen falling in Egyptian territory.

The Isrealis now claim to have shot down 25 Egyptian warplanes since the 1967 war.

The Israelis claimed they shot down two MiGs on June 26 and another one two days before.

The Israelis also confirmed that some of their jets flew over Cairo last June 17, an audicious move that led to the firing of Egypt's air force chief, Gen. Mustapha el Hennaw, and Gen. Hassan Kamel.

Their dismissal was announced in Cairo June 23. Egypt's new air chief Gen. Alo Baghdadi, lost thre MiGs by Israeli count within days of assuming his new office.

The air clash follows Israeli commando raids on three Egyptian positions in the Gulf of Suez Tuesday night and an Arab guerrilla attack on an Israeli army position in Jordan's occupied west bank.

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers said today that battle activity in South Vietnam in the last week may have dropped to the lowest level of the war and he indicated this could increase United States troop withdrawals if the lull continues.

Rogers also told a news conference that "we know pretty conclusively" that the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam has declined in the last two or three months but the reason for this is not clear.

Rogers cautioned that the reason for the battlefield lull is not yet quite clear either, saying more time would be required to decide whether it is politically significant.

He said, however, that "we hope this is a response to the announcement by President Nixon and President Thieu (of South Vietnam) at Midway." The Midway Island announcement June 8 disclosed Nixon's decision to withdraw 25,000 American troops by the end of August.

Rogers suggested the reason for the battlefield lull could be because North Vietnamese forces might be regrouping or might be having trouble replacing their manpower.

On other subjects, Rogers said the U.S. administration sees no reason why Nixon's planned visit to Romania in early August should affect "good relations with the Soviet Union."

In response to a question he said the U.S. had not advised the Soviet Union of the president's planned visit in advance of the announcement here.

The U.S. has asked Soviet officials what Soviet premier Leonid Brezhnev intends with his recent suggestion for an Asian security system. So far, Rogers said, the U.S. has no clarification.

Rogers agreed with a hopeful assessment of the Vietnam peace talks in Paris expressed today by State Undersecretary Elliott Richardson rather than a gloomy view expressed by Vice-President Spiro Agnew. Richardson expects serious negotiations to develop; Agnew claimed that U.S. critics of Nixon policy encourage the Communists to remain uncompromising.

CZECHS PURGED

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia's hardline Communist bosses purged officials in two major party organizations and announced editorial shakeups on three daily newspapers today.

The moves were part of the continuing drive to dismantle the liberal Communist apparatus and press freedoms that existed in Czechoslovakia before the Soviet-led invasion in August, 1968.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1969 —PAGE 13

HOME AT LAST, Brig. Miles Smeeton and his wife, Beryl, are seen with young crew member, Australian Bob Nance, who flew out from Miami to join them when they left England August 18, 1968. Since then they've travelled 20,000 miles in their ketch Tzu Hang, retracing the course sailed by Captain Cook in HMS Endeavour 200 years ago. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Universities Scored For Playing Politics

Ceilings Unnecessary Says Deputy

By BOB MITCHELL

B.C. universities are using enrolment restrictions as a political lever to exert pressure on the government, the deputy minister of education said today.

Dr. Neil Perry was commenting on the announcement this week the University of Victoria will hold its first-year enrolment to 2,000 students through implementation of a system of priorities for university entrance.

The University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University recently announced they would guarantee admission to Grade 12 students with an average of 65 per cent or better.

CONTINGENCY CLAUSE

Dr. Perry said the issue stems from the fact that the government can withhold five per cent of its operating grants to the universities until November.

At that time, since operating grants are based on each institution's projected enrolment, the actual number of students is compared with the projected figure.

If enrolment at a university turns out to be less than expected, the minister of education could conceivably authorize the last five per cent of a school's operating budget be spent elsewhere.

Dr. Perry described the withholding measure as a "contingency arrangement."

'AWKWARD THING'

"The awkward thing, however, is that the universities are developing postures.

"By introducing enrolment restrictions they're making it into a political issue, perhaps to the detriment of parents who would like to send their children to university."

He said the government would "sit and watch to see what developments arise out of the situation."

Education Minister Donald Brothers, on vacation this week, could not be reached for comment.

Uvic announced June 6 it would hold undergraduate enrolment at 5,200 during the 1969-70 session because its $10.5 million operating grant was $1.5 million less than requested.

UBC registrar J. E. A. Parnall and Uvic registrar Ronald Ferry had both expressed confidence their institutions will be able to accommodate all new students with a high school average of 60 per cent or better.

OBVIOUSLY PERTURBED

Uvic president-elect Dr. Bruce Partridge, in office for the first time today, said he was "obviously perturbed" by the government's handling of the operating grants.

"It means the universities can't continue to do their job as they see it."

He said the universities need better public relations to let taxpayers know what their needs are.

Storm Knocks Out Power, Sets Cottage on Fire

An early-morning thunder storm cut power line, blocked a driveway and is believed to have started a $2,500 cottage fire today.

Lightning apparently started the fire, at 8450 Lawrence in Central Saanich, when it hit a television antenna on a tree four feet from a cottage owned by Mrs. Dorothy Lorenzen about 3:20 a.m.

Firemen said the cottage was about 40 feet from the main house. When they arrived, the tree was burning but the television antenna was gone.

The roof was burned off the 10 by 14-foot cottage, and the interior destroyed.

Oak Bay firemen had an easier job.

They were called this morning to remove a tree, felled by lightning, and blocking a driveway at 2431 Bowker. Another tree was knocked over at 1989 Hampshire.

B.C. Hydro units this morning repaired a main transmission line knocked out during the storm. Residents of the Mill Bay-Cobble Hill area were without power from 3:56 a.m. until the line was fixed at 8:10.

Most of the action was north of the city proper. At the airport, rainfall was .1 inch. Tillicum had .06 and downtown at Gonzales. .01 was recorded.

SMASHED beneath a tree which it bowled over as it went out of control early Tuesday at Esquimalt Road and Alston, is car in which driver William Ferguson, 21, of 708 Suffolk, and three passengers were injured. Most seriously hurt was Ronald Carlson, 19, of CFB Esquimalt, who is in good condition in hospital today with neck and rib injuries. Police said Ferguson was driving west when the car mounted the curb and travelled 173 feet before striking tree which snapped and fell back on car.

Assessor Accused Of 'Painful' Cure

WATTS

By PAT DUFOUR

Apartments in Oak Bay have been under-assessed, while homes with large grounds have been overtaxed.

The inequalities were investigated by Oak Bay council Monday night.

Homeowners with large lots complained their assessments were too high. They were based on the value of the property if the land were subdivided and sold.

Apartments were assessed by frontage feet, rather than by square footage.

"It is an anachronism and failure to keep up with the times," said Ald. Douglas Watts.

Municipal assessor D. C. Wyatt said he had tried "to cure the ills of two years" in one fell swoop.

Said Ald. Scott Wallace, "You went by the letter of the book. You fixed it. But in the most painful manner."

Wyatt said 1966 assessments had not been perfect, but satisfactory, and blamed the provincial five-per-cent ceiling on individual increases during the past two years for this year's huge increase.

Mayor Fred Hawes said it was up to council to approve future subdivision. The assessor was in no position to decide and also, the owners might never wish to subdivide.

"It points out the unfairness on council of not having liaison with our assessor. We must be closer and know when these changes are contemplated. It is not enough to just pay his salary."

PROPERTY LIST

The assessor admitted closer consultation was necessary. "I am preparing a list of large properties for the 1970 roll. There is room for correction in this matter."

Assessments on large properties varied. Wyatt said the reason was a higher cost of servicing potential subdivisions on some of these properties.

Watts said several apartment buildings were undertaxed in relation to the land they occupy. He suggested a square footage assessment would be fairer.

The assessor said he would like to use that method, but would like approval from the provincial assessor first. Victoria uses square feet to assess apartment buildings.

PARKING LOTS

Watts suggested that the square-foot method should also be applied to commercial properties.

"The days are gone when stores relied on front footage and had junk yards at the back. Now stores are supplying off-street parking that uses much of their sites. They're penalized by the foot frontage taxation."

The assessor explained that the 1969 assessment roll was based on market sales during 1966, 1967 and part of 1968. Land and improvements related to these figures were assessed at 50 per cent of market value. But the time the court of revision was held in Febrtuary assessments were only 34.33 of the true market value.

Ald. Alex Hendry said the court of revision chairman had been at fault when he had asked homeowners appealing their assessment whether they would sell for twice the assessment value.

He told Wyatt: "It should have been more like a third. I would have thought it was your duty to have pointed that out to the chairman."

Couple to Quit Ocean Troughs For Foothills

Brig. Miles Smeeton, whose 45-foot Bermuda ketch Tzu Hang has sailed 100,000 miles in round-the-world trips in 19 years, says he's ashore to stay.

Tzu Hang tied up in the Inner Harbor Monday after a cruise which began here in September, 1966.

Says Smeeton, "We're all getting too old. I don't want to end up doing less and less each year."

He and his wife Beryl are 63, their Siamese cat Pwe, 16, and Tzu Hang, 31.

●

The Smeetons "plan to build a house somewhere, probably in the Rockie foothills where we have some range land."

On this trip they rounded Cape Horn, east to west, in a record 14 days. The only two other yachts to round in that direction are the American 77-foot pilot schooner Wanderer and Al Hansen's sloop, which rounded in 1936. He downed when his ship was wrecked off the Chilean coast.

The east to west rounding of Cape Horn is considered the most dangerous but for the Smeetons it proved uneventful.

Smeeton was all smiles today when he reported their successful rounding, details of which he intends to make the subject of another book.

He said: "It's great to finish on a high note."

American Trio Arrested After Rash of Robberies

Three Washington State men were to appear in court today following cash thefts totalling $224 from three area shops over the last two days.

Men ages 22, 23, and 28—face two Saanich charges of theft over $50, one city charge of theft under $50, and one Colwood charge of attempted theft.

Two women arrested at the same time have not been charged. One, a Canadian, age 18, was released and the other, from the U.S., is being held by immigration authorities for deportation, police said.

Colwood RCMP and Saanich police combined forces about 9 p.m. Tuesday to find the men after a Colwood shop reported an attempted theft.

Police said three men entered Reid's Low Cost, 304 Goldstream, and one attempted to take a $5 bill. The proprietor grabbed the money back and the trio fled.

About three hours before that incident, three men entered Phyl's Confectionery, 3588 Quadra. The owner told police he was serving two of the men when the third opened the cash register till and took $60.

He told Saanich officers the group fled in a car with Washington licence plates.

HELD ONE MAN

The men have also been charged with the theft of about $150 from Lee and Sons Food Market, 4085 Quadra. Police said the theft was not noticed until later Tuesday by the owner of the store.

In the city incident police said $14 was taken Monday from Willy's Variety Store, 1307 Gladstone. Owner Henry Wilby told police he was distracted by one of three men who came in while another took the money from the till.

Wilby told police he noticed the theft and held one of the men. After an argument the man left and returned 15 minutes later with the money.

The men were arrested about 9 p.m. at the Langford Pool Hall, near Goldstream and Millstream Roads.

'Gov't Welched' On Cool-Aid

Ald. G. Scott Wallace Monday accused the provincial government of "welching on its deal with Cool-Aid."

At a council meeting he criticized the government's decision to give the agency food vouchers instead of the $3,060 cash grant as originally agreed.

Council decided to ask Garth Homer of the Victoria Welfare Council to give a report on the activities of the local, youth self-help organization.

Saanich mayor and intermunicipal committee chairman Hugh Curtis said today a review of the municipal grant to Cool-Aid is in order, in light of the provincial government's change of policy.

The municipalities agreed to match the provincial government's $3,060 grant but "whether it is on a dollar-to-dollar basis hasn't been established," he said.

Meanwhile, Saanich and the Islands MLA John Tisdalle said he conducted a private investigation of Cool-Aid in April and recommended an investigation of the organization to Welfare Minister Dan Campbell.

"I didn't recommend a suspension of their money without an inquiry," he said, adding: "I would say that if a suspension was the result of my report, it would be right."

Arrest Follows Hospital Fire

A 53-year-old woman is under observation at the Royal Jubilee Hospital Bay Pavilion following a fire at Sidney's Resthaven Hospital Monday.

RCMP said today a woman was taken into custody after a blaze broke out in the basement washroom of the hospital.

A bottle of solvent had been wrapped in waxpaper and set on a ledge of a grill-covered window.

The flames set off three sprinklers.

●

Thomas Bradley, hospital administrator, said just before the fire a woman was seen entering the hospital through the emergency entrance.

He said as soon as he smelled smoke he told his staff to stand by while he ran to the basement.

"I could see the sprinkler system had taken care of the fire so there was no need to call for evacuation," he said. "The nearest patients were two floors away from the fire scene."

Arthur Mayse . . .

IN THE END, IT IS THE taxpayers who decide how much they can afford to spend on civic improvement. Victoria taxpayers looked uneasily at a five-year budget calling for $5,588,000, and last Saturday gave it the boot.

If that same program is presented to them unchanged next spring I expect it will be kicked out again.

With this in mind, I suggest that Victoria City Council would do well to set its collective teeth, pick up its rejected program, and squeeze like the very devil.

★

The end result should be a budget reduced to such items as Victorians still smarting from their last property tax boost can't get along without.

It would be nice to spend close to $1 million on city parks. Any way you look at it, traffic congestion would be eased by increased off-street parking facilities and improved funnelling of the carswarm at a total cost of $2.8 million or thereabouts.

But somebody has to pay for such massive public works. The Saturday vote, and also the highly significant non-vote, indicates that Victorians aren't willing to foot the bill.

★

Not right now at least, and certainly not to the extent that the planners envisioned.

Perhaps in some later year, when such pressing issues as regional hospitals and sewage disposal have been straightened away, the mood will change.

Today, the Victoria taxpayer and his neighbors in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt are more concerned with holding their own in dubious times than with putting out for the dream-city of the future.

This may be a hard lesson for their local governments to learn. But failure to accept and heed it will mean more money votes tossed back at those who frame them.

IF YOU ARE TRUE-married and hope most earnestly to remain in that state, take inspiration from Rev. and Mrs. Edward F. Church of 2705 Tudor Road. Last Sunday, the retired minister and his lady celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary.

So did about 150 friends and well-wishers, of whom my dear one and I made two. When we arrived, Rev. and Mrs. Church were receiving congratulations from Her Majesty, Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C Bennett and other notables.

★

The fat sheaf of letters and telegrams was read aloud by the couple's son, Dr. E. J. M. Church of Edmonton. Then we all filed past the chairs in which the bride and groom of 1909 sat side by side in a flower-decked Cadboro Bay United Church Hall.

That hall, by the way, carries this remarkable pastor's name on a bronze exterior plaque. After a career of service that began in Toronto and brought him west to Vancouver, he and his wife came here to retire. Within three years of their arrival, Mr. Church was leading a congregation that met in Cadboro Bay Scout Hall.

★

Later, with his zeal and drive to help, came the building of the Arbutus Road hall in which the pair sampled their outsized anniversary cake.

Retired once more, Mr. Church gave due credit to his wife for the recipe from which so unduring a marriage was baked.

Love and loyalty, he said, seasoned with a dash of humor.

DURABLE JERRY

Gosley's Smile Show is off and running at Langham Court Theatre, with a moon-landing by astronauts among its capers old and new. This lively turn is helped along by a clever set which Jerry's young son, Anton, assisted by Peter Knox, worked hard to prepare.

★

If all goes well with the real-life astronauts who will attempt a moon landing this month, the act stays. Otherwise, it gets yanked, and fast.

If you've never caught this hearty hometown show, or if you happen to be a visitor in search of evening entertainment, the Gosley music hall is worth investigating.

Nice touch at the opening: Bill Hosie, a braw lad wi' a Scottish song, persuading his dad in the audience to sing a chorus.

Worst act: An airy-fairy bit that should get the chop. Not because it's sick. Just dreary.
